DRILLING FOR OIL five workmen for the Purdy Sissom Drilling Company of Paducah, Ky., prepare rig for drilling through limestone after sinking a shaft to 1,400 feet in floating sand near Pinhook. Some 1,500 feet of hollow drill pipe are standing to the right of the men, waiting for minor changes on the rig and installation of safety valves on the casing installed down to 1,400 feet. Signs of oil and gas were found at the 1,400 -foot level but further drilling will be required to confirm the findings, Sisson said.

GOP Raises Curtain On Convention Today

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Republicans today raised the curtain on a smoothly programmed nominating convention they hope will lead to a second White House term for Richard M. Nixon.

The only real drama involves a duel over seating for the convention four years hence. But that was being waged off-stage when Sen. Robert Dole, chairman of the Republican national Committee, gaveled the delegates to order.

Their role, already written, will be played out over two day and three night sessions, leading to Nixon's acceptance speech Wednesday night.

The first afternoon meeting was given over to welcoming speeches and a filmed tribute to the last Republican to hold the White House before Nixon, the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Then, tonight, the spotlight swings to Nixon, the Eisenhower vice president who made it on his own in 1968 after losing the presidential race in 1960. Three keynote speeches hail the accomplishments of his first four years on Pennsylvania Avenue.

With everything programmed, down to Nixon's renomination Tuesday night, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's selection Wednesday night and final adjournment at 10:20 p.m. Wednesday, the Republican convention loomed as a sharp contrast to the all-night sessions and bruising floor fights that marked last month's Democratic Convention here.

Only one issue appeared headed for a battle on the convention floor, the question of how delegates will be allotted by states for the party's next convention in 1976.

The convention's Rules Committee considers the question today.

Unless a compromise can be reached, the issue will be fought out on the convention floor and before the nation's television viewers Tuesday afternoon in the only crack of the solid Republican unity marking this convention.

Threat of another floor fight, over the women's rights portion of the party platform, all but vanished over the weekend. Rep. Margaret Heckler of Massachusetts said no woman on the platform tried to bring up a statement on abortion.

Even the protesters appeared to be following a well-ordered schedule. Several hundred caused a massive traffic jam Sunday night outside the Fontainebleau Hotel, scene of a $500-a-ticket, fancy-dress GOP ball. A few eggs were thrown and a few party-goers were jostled but large numbers of nightstick-carrying police dispersed the demonstrators without injury or arrest.

With no Republican opposition to Nixon to worry about, GOP leaders kept up a steady drumbeat of criticism of Democratic nominee George McGovern. Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, the party chairman, charged the South Dakota senator had virtually destroyed "any chance for peace this year" in Indochina.

McGovern, meanwhile, planned a departure from the usual practice of lying low during the opposition party's convention.

He has a busy schedule for the week, including a tour of Pennsylvania flood damage today, a visit to former President Lyndon B. Johnson's ranch on Tuesday and a speech before the American Legion convention in Chicago on Wednesday.

As delegates arrived in Miami Beach, Dole added his voice to the effort to compromise the fight over the delegate-apportionment plan approved last week by the Republican National Committee at the behest of smaller, more solidly Republican states.

At the center of the fight is the prospective 1976 candidacy of Agnew, who arrived in this sweltering convention city Sunday afternoon proclaiming "I'm keeping the options open" on a possible presidential bid four years hence.

Two delegate challenges, affecting a single seat in New Mexico and two in Virginia, were before the convention's Credentials Committee.

Attempted Breakin Charge Filed

CHARLESTON — A charge of attempted break-in was filed Saturday against Richard Leroy Clark, 30, of East Prairie, in connection with a break-in attempt at Nicholina's Restaurant on South Main at 1:50 a.m. Saturday.

Sheriff W. J. (Pedro) Simmons said Louis Mor, owner of the resaturant, heard the sound of glass breaking over the intercomm connecting his home and business. Mor investigated and reportedly apprehended Clark a short distance from the Ponder Bus Co. near the restaurant.

Simmons said three other businesses were entered early Saturday. An estimated $457 worth of knives was taken from the Vowels Hardware on South Chestnut St. and approximately $1,000 worth of office equipment was taken from the Simmons Equipment Co. on West Marshall St. The Storming Bull Restaurant on West Marshall was also entered, but nothing was reported taken.

Sheriff Simmons acted on a tip from an informant and the missing items were recovered.

Clark, who was released on $1,500 bond Saturday afternoon was questioned about the three breakins. He is to appear Thursday in Magistrate Court.

Morehouse, Essex and Dexter fire departments answered the 11:45 p.m. call and battled for three hours before extinguishing flames.

Morehouse fire officials said the fire probably started under the west side of the building and spread rapidly. A dollar estimate of damages is not available.

Attempted Breakin Thwarted By Police

NEW MADRID -- An attempted breakin was thwarted Sunday at 2 a.m. at King Mercantile Company at 201 Virginia by Officers Russell Cobb and Billy Carter, who were patroling in the area.

Ozell Shumate of 550 Line St. and two 16-year old boys, who said they were from Illinois, are in the county jail for investigation. Shumate was charged by the city police with driving while drinking and having no operator license.

Shumate fled from the scene in his car as police approached. He was taken into custody following a chase by Officer Carter. Officer Cobb apprehended the juveniles. Cobb said they had a three-foot length of pump pipe and a tire tool.

Shumate is on three-years probation after he and his brother, Carl Shumate, Sr., were convicted on robbery charges in September in Mississippi County. They were found guilty by a jury of taking $3 from Michael Cagle of Kewanee on March 13 while Cagle and his girl friend were parked on a gravel road near Kewanee. Kidnaping and rape charges against them were dropped.

Carl Shumate, Jr., and Robert Schollmeyer are serving 15-year sentences for robbery and rape charges stemming from the incident. The cases were transferred to Mississippi County from New Madrid County on changes of venue.

PEOPLE THINK

Rep. John W. Wydler (R-N.Y.) recently polled his constituents on network television bias. Only 33.2 per cent said that they thought television presented both sides of issues fairly. The majority, 55 per cent, said that television presents things unfairly.

Other interesting statistics from Rep. Wydler's mail poll show that 89 per cent favor a standard Federal procedure for intervening in public-interest strikes and that 86.9 oppose school busing.

HEAVENLY HIT

Of all the encouraging signs of our times, certainly the best is the "back to God" movement among the youth of the world. The mammoth "Explo 72" rally in Dallas was just one of the outside manifestations of a strong return to morality.

It is good news when "Amazing Grace," a gospel song first published nearly 200 years ago should now become one of the most popular songs in Europe as well as in America. "The Baptist World" reports that a bagpipe version of the old favorite was recorded by the band of the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards, a British regiment stationed in West Germany and is now the No. 1 hit song on the Continent.

No less amazing than the present popularity of "Amazing Grace" is the story of its author, Rev. John Newton of London and Olney, England. Newton, born in 1725, the son of a ship's master, went to sea as an opprentice seaman at the age of 11. For six years he sailed the seas between the British Isles and the Mediterranian, and by the time he was 17 he had already gained the reputation of a swaggering, tough, blasphemous sailor.

Shanghaied and impressed into the British Navy in 1744, Newton, because of his seaworthy experience, was quickly promoted to rank of midshipman. But just as quickly the brash young man jumped ship, and for this he was publicly flogged and degraded. Boarding a ship sailing for Africa, Newton next became a slave dealer, trafficking in the selling of human flesh. In 1747 he went back to sea, this time as captain of one of the notorious slave ships. But in 1748, in the midst of a great storm at sea, John Newton surrendered his soul to God.

Returning to England, he arduously studied Greek, Hebrew, and the scriptures. It was not long before he was invited to preach in the town of Olney, Buckinghamshire; although it was not until the year 1764 that he was ordained as a full-fledged minister. Soon after that the famous poet, William Cowper, took up residence in Olney. He and John Newton became fast friends. It is undoubtedly through Cowper's influence and tutelage that Newton quickly learned the art of rhyme and rhythm and began to compose some of the most beautiful hymns written.

In 1779 the works of John Newton was published, entitled "Olney Hymns," and by 1880 they were being sung in America. In a modern hymnal in wide use in the churches of America, no less than seven of John Newton's hymns appear; and among them, "Amazing Grace," whose verses reflect John Newton's own experiences as one who had experienced the cesspools of human society 200 years ago, and having been saved by grace. How prophetic the words of Newton in another of his beloved hymns (Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken), when he speaks of that "grace, which, like the Lord, the Giver, never fails from age to age."

Doctors, beauty experts, husbands, wives, and conscience are advising Americans to eat less and less.

Against this awesome array, the food business would seem to be in a helpless situation.

But such is not the case. Food distributors expect sales to increase eight per cent in 1972.

True, individuals may be eating less in quantity. But a change in quality results in greater profits and an increased sales volume.

The food processors are optimistic because they believe in research and advertising.

Ninety per cent of the American food manufacturers introduce new products each year. For this purpose they are increasing budgets of their research departments by an average of six per cent annually.

The manufacturers predict that an increase in national advertising of ten per cent is necessary to gain public acceptance of the new products this year.

"However, retailers at the point of sale stand to benefit, or lose, in relationship to their own advertising effort. We can win approval of a good product, but we can not guide a prospect to a particular grocer," a representative of national food company asserts.

"Grocers who handle better products, which can be sold more efficiently at higher unit cost, must expect continuous increase in local advertising. It is a necessary survival investment," he said.

Also, we can't order change when the monies are not available to try the hit and miss suggestions. Our government has a responsibility in this area. Instead of dumping billions in projects that can't possibly work, it should be aiding the people in business, who are financially short, so that their doors will remain open, and employment continue."

A NEW BEGINNING

U. S. railroads are living proof of the dependence of an industry's existence upon public policy. For three quarters of a century, public policy has ignored a changing transportation industry in which railroads passed from a monopoly status to but one of a number of high-competitive means of transport. As a result, railroads have suffered under greater and greater handicaps in the tax and regulatory area.

The rails have now undertaken an all-out effort to bring a deteriorating transporation situation to public attention. One of the significant events of the year 1970 was the release of the Report of America's Sound Transportation Review Organization. The primary assignment of ASTRO was to dig deep into the reasons for the decline of America's basic transport medium -- the railroads -- and to propose corrective measures. ASTRO's Report has been aimed directly at the public and its law making representatives. Public and legislative support must be marshaled for modification of transport laws and regulations essential to self-supporting, taxpaying, investor - owned railroads. Several ASTRO proposals are now before Congress, and others will be introduced in coming months.

There is evidence that the story of the railroads is getting through along with a realization that railroads are even more important to the country now than they were a century ago. There is also evidence that ASTRO's work is reaching the public -- 84 per cent of the population now regard railroads as "extremely" or "very" essential. The year 1970 could mark a new beginning for a misunderstood industry.

NEW RULES FOR WELFARE STATE?

Dumitru Danielopol, the well known news columnist (Copley Press) wonders if he didn't come to this country 25 years too soon.

According to some politicians, he relates, everyone is "entitled" to a guaranteed income ranging from $6,500 to $10,000 for a family of four. Everyone would have a six-week vacation every year; government should take care of everyone's children; medical and dental care should be free for poor people; national subsidies are due everyone.

"I read a lot of testimony but no one seemed to mention hard work, initiative, or doing a better job," writes Danielopol. "As I recall, no one offered programs to the 'poor' when I arrived in New York 25 years ago. And believe me, I qualified under any yardstick you want to use."

Danielopol explains that as a non-resident alien he couldn't have a regular job. Two lawyers who owned property in New York City "took pity on him" and made him manager -cum-renting agent for 120 apartments on commission. He kept that job for five years, even after he took a second job at Radio Free Europe in 1950. He ran up and down stairs looking after contracts, repairs, cleaning, painting, and deadbeats, along with working as a writer, announcer, actor and planner.

"It never crossed my mind that anyone owed me a living," says Danielopol. "I did what millions of immigrants like myself have done for a couple of centuries. I fended for myself."

His Radio Free Europe job paid only $3,500 a year, so Danielopol taught English to fellow Romanians at $5 a lesson. He became "assistant" to a photographer, selling pictures of weddings and christenings and made 30c a copy. He supplemented his income by sometimes selling paintings, sometimes mutual funds. It was no sinecure,he says; it was either sell or starve. All of which kept him working to 11 p.m., and he had to be up at 5:30 a.m. to be in the Radio Free Europe studio at 6.

"Looking back, I suppose they were difficult years. I didn't feel sorry for myself. I just thought how lucky I was to be in this country, where I was free to take the initiative, free to try, free to exercise any talent God was kind enough to give me."

The psychiatrist wanted to get out to the links, but there were three women in the reception room who had appointments.

"I'll make short work of them," he said to the nurse.

He strode out to the reception room and pointed a menacing finger at the first lady. "Your trouble is you eat too much. I've told you to cut out all that food you eat. By the way, what's your little girl's name?"

"Candy," answered the lady.

"Ah," cried the psychiatrist, "see how your subconscious desires rise to the surface when you name your child."

He looked at the second woman. "And as for you, lady, you are a miser, you hoard everything, and by the way, what's the name of your little girl?"

"Penny," answered the woman shyly.

"Ah, ha," thundered the psychiatrist, "see how your subconscious reacts to your fondest desires. Penny, pennies, always thinking of money."

He looked toward the third woman, but she had already started for the door. She held her six-year-old son's hand tightly in her own. "Come, Peter," she said, "we'd better go now."

A DEPLORABLE
TACTIC

The results of political tinkering with the nation's medical system could be a demonstration of how not to achieve the widest distribution and the highest quality medical care. By and large, most of the schemes and plans to change the American medical system are politically oriented and ignore the counsel of the nation's doctors.

"American Medical News", for example, reports on a national press briefing on "Health Care for All," sponsored by a group devoted to the advancement of scientific writing. Notes the "News", "On theprogram, the federal planners were teamed ... with the academic planners ... The briefing had 27 speakers: 11 medical academicians, 8 federal officials, 3 physician-administrators of government programs, 2 activist medical residents, 1 union leader, 1 insurance exectuive , and 1 lobbyist for the Committee on National Health Insurance. There was not one practicing MD represented on any of the panels which purportedly were designed to provide information about provision of health care to Americans. That such tactics should be used to present to the public such a one-sided picture is deplorable."

During the press briefing, one proposal was made that if physicians cannot be persuaded to practice in rural and inercity areas, then the government should assign them to areas of need by legislative fiat. The proposal would put doctors under a form of dictatorship as oppressive as that of any Iron Curtain nation. Theoretically, the rest of the U. S. would remain free. Anyone who thinks that such a system would work is fooling himself.

Meanwhile, proposals of the medical profession to improve the quality and quantity of health care are largely ignored. Says the "News", "Ignored is the firm AMA policy that quality medical care for all -- including the poor -- is a social imperative. Ignored is the AMA's campaign to enlarge the physician population ... Ignored is the AMA's Medicredit proposal for a system of medical insurance based on tax credits for the poor and near-poor." When will people realize tha merely passing laws and spending billions of taxpayers' dollars are of themselves no guarantee of a health care utopia!

STRUCK OUT AGAIN

It was a distressing spectacle to witness in one weekend both W. Averell Harriman and Ramsey Clark being trotted out again by the TV news media to pontificate on foreign affairs. Averell Harriman creakily wheezed into the mike an assertion that the administration had misunderstood certain communist moves in Vietnam in 1968 while he alone had comprehended their true motives.

Ramsey Clark, filmed in Hanoi, brayed into the mike a statement that our POWs are in fact well treated, well fed and well cared for. Both of these men claim they should be granted credence because they are former governmental officials. Therefore, it is in order to evaluate their records while in federal office and determine their batting averages. Both have consistnet records and batted about one thousand; unfortunately, both were consistently wrong and batted about one thousand on the wrong side.

Time and time again, Harriman, Clark and those of like persuasion have gone to bat against the communists and been traded right out of their pants and then have exhibited the brazen effrontery to warbel to the U. S. citizenry what a fine job they did. Go back into retirement, Averell and Ramsey! When we want fantasy like you dish out, we read Mother Goose.

What is needed most now and what should be demanded by an aroused U. S. citizenry is tough, hard-nosed U. S. leadership who know the communist conspiracy, understand communist perfidy and are determined that the Freedom side will prevail. All 1972 campaign rhetoric should be evaluated in this light.

New FBI Chief Will Not Tolerate Extremists' Bomb-Planting Brand of Dissidence
By Victor Riesel

For many of us who admired the FBI's skill and who believed it had been the victim of unfounded criticisms, which always had it "persecuting" intrepid dissenters but never talked of its crushing of the Ku Klux Klan and other Fascist extremists, the "Bureau" was a strange place without "The Director." Meaning John Edgar Hoover. Or "Edgar."

The new FBI chief came upon it and its friends suddenly. It was an eerie moment. Communist leaders and at least one globally known political leader in the Senate said the world was better off with Mr. Hoover dead. Many wondered what would be the new policies of Acting Director Gray. I asked him. Here, and I'm proud to offer it, is his reply written exclusively for this column.

By Patrick Gray III, Acting Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation

WASHINGTON -- I welcome this opportunity to write a guest column for Mr. Riesel. He had long been a friend of the FBI and of all men and women performing law enforcement duties in behalf of our fellow citizens. We appreciate deeply his warm support.

As the "new" head of the FBI, I accept this great responsibility with feelings of both pride and humility--proud that I have been selected to continue the work of J. Edgar Hoover who founded and built the FBI into the finest investigative agency in the world; humble because I realize that I, together with the dedicated men and women of the FBI, bear a heavy burden of responsibility to our fellow citizens.

In any organization, a new leader brings with him a different style and manner of operation. There have been some changes in the Bureau already--and there will be more. However, the substance of the FBI--its investigative integrity, high standards, and esprit de corps---has not and will not be changed. Working together with the dedicated men and women of the FBI, we will continue to be devoted to the highest ideals of public service.

One of my beliefs is that our free government must protect and perpetuate itself without denying the basic freedoms inherent in the American way of life.

In America we cherish peaceful dissent. This is the very heart of our democratic system. Difference of opinion can be lawfully expressed in many different ways.

However, planting a bomb in the Pentagon, the Capitol or other government building is not peaceful dissent.

A sniper attack against police officers carrying out their duties is not peaceful dissent.

Setting fire to a college building, vandalism and "trashing" a business, educational, or governmental office are not forms of peaceful dissent.

These and other acts of a similar nature are crimes--and should be so regarded.

In America today we are experiencing the rise of a new type of crime which is no less a crime because its perpetrators piously claim they are acting for so-called "political" aims.

I do not refer to peaceful assemblies, to peaceful debate and dissent and to peaceful demonstrations which are and must be protected by the Constitution.

Rather, I do refer, among others, to the extremist "New Leftist" movement, whose elements, such as the Weathermen, have been involved in guerilla warefare tactics. In a number of bombings, public claims of Weathermen participation have been issued.

The Weathermen, which broke with the Students for a Democratic Society in 1969, is currently operating underground. This means that their adherents have changed their names, are utilizing aliases, and are moving clandestinely from one one location to another. In this underground, guerrilla attacks against police, military installations, office and government buildings are planned. There are bomb factories in this underground where explosives are fashioned into homade bombs. Criminal fugitives--wanted for violation of Federal and state laws--find sanctuary in this underground.

The Black Panther party also has been involved in guerrilla violence, expecially in attacks against law enforcement officers.

The violence-prone extremist, whether of the "left" or the "right," represents a grave danger to our society. The person who would assassinate a political candidate, hijack an airplane, plant a bomb in a building--all of these individuals have a terryfying power to harass, disrupt, and destroy. There are the anonymous telephone callers who allege that bombs are secreted inside a building or in a vehicle. In our complex, interrelated society the potential destructive power of a fanatical minority--even one person-- is extremly great.

The full investigative facilities of the FBI, acting under Federal statutes, are being brought to bear aginst this type of criminal.

Then there is the threat to American citizens of organized crime. In my opinion, effective progress had been made by the FBI, operating under recently enacted statues, in combating this menace. I am now making inquiries as to whether it is doing all it can in this area. I can assure the American people that they will be no letup in the fight against these professional criminals who are defrauding citizens of millions of dollars annually.

In the cause of a free people and their free government to protect themselves-- from both the criminal and the ideological-type extremist--the cooperation of every citizen is of invaluable assistance.

In this regard, the labor movement, over the years, has been in the forefrong of the struggle forefront of the struggle for this noble cause. The extremist, in whatever capacity, and the criminal work against the best interests of the laboring man . We in America are proud of the many contributions of the labor movement. It has been inestimable help to law enforcement and the FBI.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

MIAMI BEACH -- International Telephone and Telegraph, which got caught in a plot to help subsidize the Republican convention in San Diego, is lying low here at Miami Beach.

Two ITT press agents, Bernie Goodrich and Jack Horner, are passing out free booze from a small bar in their suite at the Eden Roc. But the drinks are intended for foreign newsmen who use ITT's communications facilities.

The ITT operatives are under strict injunction to keep out of Republican politics.

This is a dramatic departure from the way Dita Beard, the grand dame of ITT, operated at past conventions. She pushed ITT's corporate interests in the smoke-filled rooms with the brass and brains befitting a lobbyist for the world's most predatory corporation.

Whats's more, she could match the backroom boys drink for drink and story for story.

But this was before she wrote her controversial memo, suggesting that the financial offer to the Republicans was lined to the settlement of ITT's antitrust case.

No outsider knows for sure whether ITT promised the Republicans $100,000, $200,000, $300,000, $4000,000 or $600,000. All these figures were mentioned by ITT officials testifying under oath.

ITT's DOWNPAYMENT

The committee collecting the convention funds in San Diego received a check from ITT for $100,000 as a downpayment. Mrs. Beard in her memo and San Diego's Congressman Bob Wilson in a taped interview both put the pledge at $400,000.

But this is now political history. ITT saved its money: the Republicans moved their convention to Miami Beach. And Dita Beard? She's still in Denver where she wound up in a hospital with an alleged heart attack during the ITT hullabaloo.

Her attorney, David Fleming, tells us she is in such poor health that she may never be able to return to Washington. Her family doctor, Dr. Victor Liszka, tells us she has suffered another "relapse."

The doctors who were assigned by the Senate to examine her found "no objective evidence of a heart attack."

Fleming wouldn't say where Mrs. Beard is staying in Denver. Her address is secret, her phone unlisted. But he confirmed that she is still drawing full salary from ITT.

QUOTA POLITICS

The Republicans are quietly searching for a way to open their party to more women, blacks and young people without resorting to what Vice President Agnew has denounced as "quota politics."

GOP leaders are keenly aware that the Whig Party vanished after electing four Presidents in the 1800s, because the party wouldn't widen its base.

Republican strategists are particularly eager to broaden the party's appeal this year. The would like to take advantage of the expected Democratic defection and, hopefully, convert Democrats who vote for President Nixon into permanent Republicans.

The strategists have been cheered by an unannounced survey of Republican delegates. This showed 30 per cent are women, 13 per cent under 30, five per cent black, two per cent Spanish speaking- and two per cent Jewish. This compares favorably with the Democratic convention.

President Nixon, meanwhile, has joined Agnew in opposing the quota principle. In a letter to the American Jewish Committee about equal employment opportunity, the President declared:

"I agree that numerical goals, although an important and useful tool to measure progress which remedies the effect of past discrimination, must not be allowed to be applied in such a fashion as to, in fact, result in the imposition of quotas....

"I have asked the appropriate departmental heads to review their policies to ensure conformance with these views."

The word, however, apparently didn't reach the man in charge of economic opportunity. In an August 9 memo to all employees, Director Philip Sanchez established quotas for hiring.

Notes the memo: "While some notable progress has been made in the areas of minority and female employment, there remains much to be accomplished."

The memo, therefore, sets out the following long-range "goals" for minorities and women: Blacks, 30 per cent; Spanish-speaking, 6 per cent; American Indians, 1 per cent; Orientals, 1 per cent, women, 37 per cent.

Footnote: Associate Director Louis Churchville played down the reference to quotas. "I can't relate quota to goal," he said. "That we're saying in the memo is that if you have attrition, try and reach these goals. If you can't meet those goals, you just continue to try.

Missourian To Play Key Role At Convention

Mrs. Rosemary Ginn, national committeewoman from Columbia, is scheduled to present a summary of the report of the Delegates and Organization Committee to the full convention.

Mrs. Ginn said the Missouri delegation will be bolstered in Miami Beach by the presence of the Republican nominee for governor, Christer "Kit" Bond, and his choice for state Republican chairman, Richard "Dick" Berkeley, Kansas City, Mo.

In an address to the Missouri delegates, Bond, referring to the upset victory by Democratic President Harry S. Truman, said, "I want all of you people to take back to your workers this message:

"We have to be careful that this is not another 1948.

"The President's chances in Missouri are excellent. But so many people are enthusiastic about him that we may not do as well as we should if you people do not work hard."

The 38-year-old Bond turned attention to his own race for governor:

"We are not only facing Ed Dowd (Democratic nominee), but the weight of the Hearnes machine. They are going to play rough and dirty, but we think we can meet them head on."

"We've the finest slate of candidates for Missouri that I have seen in some time," Mrs. Ginn told a newsman during an appearance at a reception honoring Republican National Chairman Bob Dole, a senator from Missouri's sister state of Kansas.

"When I see these young men, and I think what they can do for the state of Missouri, I can't work hard enough," Mrs. Ginn said.

Another non-delegate from Missouri who is in Miami Beach for the convention is State Sen. Richard M. Webster of Carthage.

Webster, only Republican to be speaker of the Missouri house in recent years, is the father of the youngest member of the Kansas delegation.

Bill Webster, 18, is an alternate delegate from Lawrence, Kan., where he will be a sophomore this fall at the University of Kansas.

Young Webster is serving a dual role, because he also is a radio newsman furnishing reports to at least three stations in Missouri and eight in Kansas.

"I'm glad to be an 18-yearold delegate," said Webster. "We need to get more young people involved."

The alternate delegate-newsman said he is considered something of a traitor since he moved to Kansas and goes to school there.

"Everyone else in my family has gone to Missouri university," he said "I chose K.U. because I like Kansas.

"My family still lets me come home occasionally, though."

Young Webster attended high school in Carthage and is interested in both political science and journalism in his college work.

Between school term, he is a full-time newsman at radio station KLWN in Lawrence and works there part-time during the school year.

Asked about his interests at the convention, young Webster said:

"There are a lot of things I don't think are perfect, and I think we need to look at. We can't just give the President a rubber stamp. But I believe we have come up with a pretty good platform."

The 18-year-old alternate delegate said he has read the proposed platform plank on Vietnam twice, and wants to read it a third time.

"However, I think the President has done an outstanding job in handling the Vietnam situation," he said.

"I'd like to see the war over as quickly as possible. I have a brother who is on an ammunition ship five miles off the coast of Vietnam, and I'm certainly concerned.

"It's going to be an issue. It's going to be the issue."

New Irish Terrorism

BELFAST (AP) — Chieftains of the Irish Republican Army's diehard Provisional wing have ordered a new wave of terrorism to prevent Roman Catholics cooperating with the British Army.

Provo units were told to intensify intimidation to their fellow Catholics to stop any cooperation with the troops who occupied Catholic districts in Belfast and Londonderry three weeks ago.

Fraternizers are to be dealt with "harshly," the order said, and informers are to be shot.

The Provos announced that they were responsible for the murder Saturday night of a Protestant factory owner, James Neill. The guerrillas said they picked him up in a Catholic bar on a spying mission.

Another man was found beaten and shot through the head on the outskirts of Belfast. He was the 516th confirmed death in the three years of religious warfare in Northern Ireland.

British troops reported they hit three gunmen in clashes in Belfast and across the border with the Irish Republic but the army did not know if they were killed.

The army said its men discovered an IRA bomb factory in a house in Armagh and seized three gallons of nitrobenzene. It was enough to blow up more than a dozen buildings, an officer said.

Three metal beer barrels stuffed with more than 180 pounds of explosives were found in a car park alongside a Catholic church in Belfast.

Troops Down

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command announced today that American troop strength in Vietnam had dropped to 39,200 men as of last Thursday, and other sources said that in the ensuing three days it had fallen below 39,000, beating President Nixon's withdrawal timetable by 11 days.

Nixon had ordered U.S. strength in Vietnam cut to 39,000 by Sept. 1. He is scheduled to make another troop withdrawal announcement Aug. 28, and the strongest speculation is that the next cut will total about 15,000 men.

That would bring the total of Americans remaining in Vietnam to below 25,000, compared to a peak strength of 543,000 in April 1969.

About 100,000 more U.S. servicemen are fighting the war from air bases in Thailand and Guam and aboard ships of the 7th Fleet off the coast of Vietnam.

3'000 S. Viets Set Block For Viet Cong

SAIGON (AP) — Three thousand South Vietnamese troops launched a drive today aimed at blocking a North Vietnamese division from pushing out of the captured Que Son Valley into South Vietnam's populous coastal lowlands south of Da Nang.

U.S. Air Force crews reported spotting big North Vietnamese 130mm artillery guns and tanks in the area of the Que Son fighting, some 35 miles south of Da Nang. The air force communique said F4 Phantoms knocked out three of the guns and two tanks. It was the closest such heavy weapons have been reported to Da Nang.

The North Vietnamese pushed through the valley during the weekend, inflicting heavy troop and equipment losses on the South Vietnamese. It was the biggest Communist gain since Quang Tri fell last May 1 and posed an immediate threat to Da Nang, the country's second largest city, and a heavily populated 50-mile strip of Highway 1 to the South.

CHARLESTON — Three arrests were reported by the police department over the week- end.

HAVE YOU HEARD WHAT'S HAPPENING AT CROWLEY'S RIDGE RESORT?

Nixon To Leave For Convention

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — His nomination acceptance speech virtually completed, President Nixon was to conclude his longest-ever stay at Camp David today.

Nixon, who had dinner at the compound's Aspin Lodge both Saturday and Sunday night with foreign adviser Henry Kissinger, is expected to return to Washington today, then fly to Florida on Tuesday—the day the Republican National Convention in Miami Beach nominates him for a second term.

The President came to the wooded Catoctin Mountain hideaway last Monday and his continuous stay of eight days is the longest since he took office. He did return to Washington twice to keep appointments.

While at the Marine-guarded retreat, he cleared from his desk pending paperwork and drafted the acceptance speech he will give at Wednesday night's convention session.

He also spent portions of the sunny afternoons at the swimming pool near his lodge and took his Irish Setter, King Timahoe, for walks along the compound's tree-shaded lanes.

Vietnam—a key issue in his bid for a second term—appeared to take a major portion of the President's time at Camp David.

From Camp David, Nixon was in communication with Kissinger while the presidential assistant conferred in Saigon with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Immediately after Kissinger returned to the United States Saturday, he flew to Camp David where he stayed until Sunday night. His journey prompted a flood of speculation about a possible breakthrough in Vietnam negotiations.

While there was no confirmation of progress, there were hints Nixon may use his Miami Beach acceptance speech to expose any new Vietnam Developments.

Agnew Undecided On '76 Presidency

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew says he has made no decision to run for president in 1976 but "I'm keeping the options open."

He set out that position Sunday amid speculation that the seeds of an Agnew presidential nomination in 1976 are being sown as the rules are written by the 1972 Republican National Convention.

"I'm very pleased with it," the vice president said when asked about Miami Herald and Washington Post delegate surveys showing him by far the favorite for the 1976 GOP presidential standard bearer.

"But this doesn't mean I've decided to seek the presidency," Agnew added. Agnew made the comment to newsmen as he focused his arrival and first-day convention activities on getting out a youth vote for Nixon.

The vice president predicted at a poolside youth-appreciation dinner that a great many more of the new 18-year-old voters and other young people are going to vote for Nixon than people expect. And he said they're going to "because of his programs."

Agnew said these include phase-out of the draft, and a foreign policy "that will keep us from becoming implicated in frustrating and debilitating — yes, and demoralizing — wars."

Two Arrests Reported

EAST PRAIRIE -- Two arrests were reported by the police over the week- end.

Harvey Weakley of Charleston forfeited a $25 bond posted on a charge of having open beer in possession. Dennis Craig Prince of Charleston paid a $25 fine for careless and heedless driving.

Ann Landers
Mothers Sometimes Have To Take Children Shopping

Dear Ann Landers: "Fort Lauderdale's" remarks hit a sensitive spot. I am a mother who takes her two pre-school children shopping because I have no choice. Millions of other mothers are in the same spot. To suggest that this is a great way to "kill time" is rediculous. I can think of 200 other things I'd rather do.

Few mothers can afford a daytime sitter every time there is shopping to do. Dad isn't the answer, either. He seldom gets home before the stores close. Most Saturdays he works. When he is free, he is entitled to a day of recreation.

I resent being called a "slob" because I must take my children with me. I am trying to teach them shopping manners, not so much for the sake of the storekeepers, but for my own sanity. Do you think the merchants would prefer that mothers with small children stay out of their stores? If not, here are some suggestions for them:

(1) Don't put tempting objects within the reach of young children.

(2) Set up a child-sized card table with inexpensive coloring books and simple but sturdy toys. This would give the youngsters something to do besides terrorize Mom and the clerks.

(3) Larger stores might consider a playroom with sitters who would be paid by the so store or "tipped" by the mothers. I'd be happy to give someone 50 cents to take my child off my hands for half an hour or 45 minutes.

I'll bet "Fort Lauderdale" never had children to take shopping -- or she had a beautiful arrangement with someone. If it was the latter, I envy her. If it was the former, I feel sorry for her. —— Shopworn In Nebraska

Dear Neb' Apparently "Fort Lauderdale's" letter struck many a raw nerve around the country. The mail was heavy -- and 100 to 1 with you. Here's another:

Dear Ann: I live in Fort Lauderdale, too. If that lady wants to sit with my kids while I go shopping I'd be glad to drop them off at her house. What's her address? --- Beth.

Dear Beth: Sorry, no can do, but thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son will be coming home in a few weeks. He went four years to Stanford and after graduation took a job in Palo Alto for the summer. We paid his tuition for four years, but he lived up to his responsibilities by making good grades and staying out of trouble.

During his senior year he shared an apartment with a girl. We let him know we did not approve, but we didn't forbid it. We reasoned that a 21 year old boy has the right to live as he pleases away from home.

Yesterday we received a letter requesting that we take the twin beds out of his room and replace them with one large bed which he is willing to pay for. He is bringing his girl home in September and is sure we will get along fine (no mention of marriage). I cannot agree to this arrangeement and have told my husband so. He says the world is changing and I should get with it. True, I know our son and this girl were sleeping together in California, but somehow I can't bring myself to permit it in our house. What do you say, Ann? - Greenwich Mother.

Dear Mother: I'm with you. To provide a double bed for the comfort and convenience of your son and his girl friend is tacit approval, if not encouragement of their premarital sexual activity. Stick to your principles and tell him nothing doing.

Hayti, PB In L.L. Championship

PARMA -- Weekend showers came a day late for Dexter and Parma little league baseball teams after they were knocked out of the title picture of the first annual Southeast Missouri Little League championship baseball tournament Saturday night.

The host club must have felt like it was raining when Hayti put on an awesome display of power in the top of the sixth inning to surge into a 16-10 lead after trailing 10-4 going into the sixth and held on for a 16-14 decision and ticket into tonight's 8:45 final against Poplar Bluff, an easy 6-1 winner over Dexter.

Trophies will be awarded the top four finishers along with the team displaying the best sportsmanship and to the event's two most outstanding players. A 15-player all- star squad will be selected from the entire 20-team tournament field.

Hayti struck like lightning in the top of the sixth frame to deny the host a shot at Poplar Bluff, scoring 12 runs on 10 hits and had 11 men reach base safely before an out was recorded. Gary Atchley was victim of the barrage and Ricky Morgan served as fireman. Atchley had limited Hayti to no- hits through three innings of relief.

But Parma's biggest downfall came in the field were 11 runs were allowed to cross the plate due to errors in the game.

Lynn Robinson headed up Hayti's offense with three hits in three trips to the plate, including a triple which was one of eight extra base slams by the junior Indians.

Ricky Morgan and James Perkins had three hits each for Parma, who had 13 safeties in the game.

Parma made a gallant bid to capture the victory in the last of the sixth when they scored four runs and had runners on second and third before a rash of bad luck, coupled with some top Hayti fielding, ended the hosts' hopes.

Poplar Bluff got two- hit pitching from Mike Lynch and a two- for- two hitting performance from leftfielder Johnny Taylor and a two for three job at the plate from Richard Hite to power the Junior Raiders offense that scored runs in all but the first inning. Hite and Taylor combined for the first run in the game by slamming a triple and single back to back in the second and then played key roles in scoring three of the remaining five runs.

Rookie Sparks Big Red

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Old Timmy is Tim Van Galder, a 28-year-old rookie quarterback, who came off the bench in the second half and sparked the St. Louis Cardinals to a come-from - behind 17-13 victory over the Denver Broncos in one of 10 National Football League exhibition games over the weekend.

Van Galder, a three-year member of the Cardinal taxi squad, came in with Denver ahead 13-0 and threw a 29-yard pass to Jackie Smith on his first play.

"We needed some momentum and he gave it to us," said Cardinal coach Bob Hollway after St. Louis had pulled the game out on Van Galder's five-for-eight completions for 82 yards, including the touchdown pass.

Van Galder was more fortunate than another rookie, running back Ray Jamieson of the Oakland Raiders. Jamieson suffered a broken neck during the Raiders' 34-9 romp over the Los Angeles Rams in their nationally televised game.

Jamieson underwent surgery for more than two hours and was reported "doing quite well" Sunday with no evidence of paralysis.

The Finley Phenomenon

Charlie O. Won't Win Any Popularity Contests, But He May Win a Pennant

CHICAGO — (NEA) — No team belonging to Charlie Finley has ever drawn a million in attendance. It's doubtful the figure will be reached in this prospective pennant-winning year.

At the halfway mark, the Oakland Athletics were running 50,000 behind the 1971 totals, primarily because of l'affaire Blue. Vida was the magnet last year when the A's hit a peak of 914,993. His long, bitter holdout this spring affected both the A's and Vida himself as an effective pitcher and charismatic personality.

Finley, the maverick owner who said he never before had to deal solely with a lawyer, confesses that both sides were hurt. Although he was portrayed like a plantation owner ("He treats me like a colored boy," said Vida after rejoining the team), Charlie protests, "No plantation owner ever gave one of his slaves a $10,000 car or a gas credit card or insurance or brought his mother and family out to the West Coast and put them up at the finest hotel and dined them.

"It hurts you quite a bit to see them hurt themselves. I think Vida Blue is a boy with problems."

Charlie has often been insensitive in his relations with people. Besides Blue (he tried to get him to change his name to Vida True Blue), he had major problems with Reggie Jackson when the young outfielder blossomed as a home run slugger in 1969. If a writer covering the club displeases him with a story, Charlie will get on the phone and cuss him out.

He has a healthy streak of personal vanity. He relishes the personal publicity which has come to him as a sports figure. He has a disconcerting way of referring to himself in the third person as "Finley did this." He'll plunge heartily into his own promotions, wearing a "Beatles" wig or growing a mustache.

Charlie is a distinguished looking man of average height with black eyebrows below a halo of silver white hair surrounding a high forehead. He is 54 years old and he has looked virtually the same for the last dozen years. The Finleys, Irish Protestants originating from County Offaly, are sturdy stock. His grandmother is a hale 97. His father, retired from the steel mills of Birmingham, Ala., and Gary, Ind., is a hearty 80. Charlie talks deliberately and well, with a trace of hardness in his speech from an industrial environment.

"I worked five years for U.S. Steel as a machinist," he says, "and completed my four-year apprenticeship. I also worked five years for a shipbuilder. I had nothing until I was 32 years old. I had trouble paying the grocery bill. All I know is work. I enjoy work."

He translates this into artistic success for the Athletics.

"I have developed this team according to my thoughts from the beginning," he says. "Trial and error, giving youngsters a chance and if they can't do it, move on. Sacrificing ball games so they can get the experience to be ball players. I work at my job 24 hours a day."

Missouri Champs Win Series Opener

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — The defending champions of the Babe Ruth World Series were knocked out of the saddle Sunday by a group of newcomers to the tournament.

Prince George, Md., scored in the last of the eighth inning Sunday to beat defending champion Puerto Rico 4-3.

Tim Maxwell opened the eighth with a hit to left field and Bill Waldow was safe on an error. Preston Taylor's sacrifice bunt was good for a hit, loading the bases with no outs. Greg Wells hit a ground ball to the third baseman, who threw wild to the plate and Maxwell scored the winning run.

In other games, Hawaii rallied for seven runs in the top of the seventh inning to break up a no-hitter and defeat Kirkland, Wash., 8-2, Montgomery, Ala., whipped Terre Haute, Ind., 10-3, and Sedalia, Mo., eliminated the host Pine Bluff team 4-1.

Righthander Greg Gooch of Sedalia set Pine Bluff down on two hits.

Terre Haute will play Puerto Rico at 6 p.m. today, Sedalia will go against Kirkland, Wash., at 8 p.m. and Prince George, Md., will face Montgomery at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

China Wants To Play Ball

SANTO DOMINGO, D.R. (AP) — Communist China is sounding out Latin American baseball officials on the possibility of entering an amateur tournament scheduled for November in Nicaragua.

Carlos Garcia, president of the Nicaraguan Baseball Federation, said Thursday Chinese officials had approached Charles Parsons, head of the Asian Baseball Federation, and showed interest in playing at an amateur world series in Managua Nov. 15-Dec. 5.

Garcia, here for a Caribbean amateur series, told a newsman the Communist Chinese are however, requesting the elimination of Taiwan from the roster of the Internation Amateur Baseball Federation as a condition to their eventual participation.

China's request is difficult, Garcia said. But he added that if the world body granted Communist China its wish, Nicaragua would issue visas to the Chinese team. He said he understood baseball was being played in Shanghai.

He said 22 countries from North and South America, Asia and Europe had already signed up for the world tournament.

The Friend Of Marie Antoinette

THE FATAL FRIENDSHIP. Marie Antoinette, Count Fersen, and the Flight to Varennes. By Stanley Loomis. Doubleday & Co. $9.95.

Like King Charles II, historical cliches take an unconscionable time a-dying. To most of us, Marie Antoinette did not have one fragment of brain in her head to rattle against another; she was both frivolous and extravagant, and she got what she was asking for when the French Revolutionaries chopped off her head.

Stanley Loomis, more persuasively than anybody else thus far, gives the lie to this myth, with depth and penetration.

The "fatal friendship" to which the title refers is that of the queen and a peripatetic Swedish nobleman, Count Axel Fersen, who at the last tried with extraordinary bravery to slip the royal family across the Austrian border via Varennes on June 20, 1791, after the Revolution had begun, but before the Terror. No one really knows whether Fersen was the queen's lover, but Loomis believes he was. Through cumbersome planning and execution, plus incredibly bad luck, the attempt failed. The royal party was intercepted and returned to Paris, eventually to the guillotine.

Face May Not Be Familiar But Maxwell's Voices Are

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Unlike children, Len Maxwell is heard but not seen.

Maxwell is a voice. Or, rather, many voices. Sometimes the voice of a hamburger — or, perhaps, a bird, or, maybe, a cat. The unreal voices heard on radio and television commercials of unreal characters.

But, Maxwell emphasizes (returning to his own voice after having been a hot dog), "While you may be hearing me you never see me on commercials. That's because of product identification. If I identified myself physically with any one product, then I couldn't do commercials for a similar product."

Which, he says, could lead to a cut in income. Maxwell, a slender 41-year-old who carries on a conversation in a wild variety of voices (a little girl, a frenzied disc jockey, a super-virile beer drinker), doesn't care to talk about money other than to say his is a very well-paid field.

He discovered this while working as a standup comic in a club. "I was a comic for 14 years. I started at 21," he says. "I did imitations and then sketches (to illustrate he runs through Vaughan Monroe, Billy Eckstine and his version of a bunch of jailbirds singing "Heart of My Heart".)

"A man caught my act and asked me to do a commercial. I did and I was paid an exorbitant amount of money. I thought the talent agency had made a mistake and called to say so. I don't know which voice I used but apparently I gave the impression I thought the check was too small. They sent me more money."

Maxwell, who has been doing commercials fulltime since 1964, says he has done the voices for as many as six characters in one commercial, that he can do as many as five commercials in an hour, and that he averages between 1,500 and 2,000 different commercials a year.

He also supplies the voices in some of the cartoons shown in movie houses, being a partner in a firm that produces such short subjects. "In one cartoon I do 12 different characters," he says, "and each one has a different voice."

Actually, he says, "about 40 per cent of the stuff I do is straight — that is I use my own voice. But (with a smile) I have different straight voices." And he demonstrates, doing a perfume commercial several times and in his own voice but each time subtly shaded — sexy, cool, puzzled, warmly appealing.

"Ever since I was a kid I imitated people," he says. "I'd like to tell you how I do it, but I'm really not sure. It's more mental than anything else. You just think you are what they want you to be and the voice comes."

Voices, however, aren't enough to content Maxwell. "It's not that I'm tired of voices," he says, "but I've been there." So he currently is at work on the book for a musical comedy.

"Writing is my big thing," he says in his real voice. "It, I think, is where my future is at. I wrote much of my own material when I was a comic, and I've written comedy shows for television.

"I hope to finish the musical soon, and then I want to write a straight play. I really want to write."

Rent-A-Plant

New Business For Youth

DALLAS (AP) — Business is almost too good, George Voneiff, 11, will tell you.

He knows what he's talking about, too, despite his lack of years. For almost a year he has been a quite successful businessman.

"My mother and I have always had a big interest in plants," George said Wednesday. "Ours seem to grow real well. When a woman in my mother's office said she couldn't get anything to grow, we joked and said we'd rent her one of ours."

At that point the woman took them up on the offer. So George, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Voneiff, launched himself off into the rent-a-plant business. He charged 50 cents a month and found other customers easily interested and satisfied.

"At the end of the month we would either pick a plant up, leave it or bring another plant," George said.

"Our business is called DGEM. That stands for Daddy, George, Elizabeth (his sister, 9) and Mother. When DGEM had collected about $50, I decided to open a savings account."

George sells some plants and several florists are among the buyers.

Now he has branched out a bit — to plant-sitting.

"We will keep plants for anyone who wants to go on vacation," he said. "We keep them here (at his home) and take care of them free of charge. The only thing we ask is that we get a cutting of the plants. We call it pinching rights."

What's The Law?

The Case Of The Sexy Panties

By Jack Strauss, LL. B.

Arthur was a fairly well-known tennis player who lost a match by a score that he considered unmentionable. Actually, it became even more unmentionable than Arthur had contemplated.

Max, a lingerie manufacturer, got the brilliant idea of reproducing a newspaper page as a print for sexy panties. And the page he selected prominently contained the story of Arthur's loss.

Before long Arthur's name began appearing on the fanny of many a shapely girl and Arthur, when he heard about it, didn't like it. Consequently, he sued Max for libel and invasion of his privacy.

"My heaven!" he complained in court. "It was bad enough losing the match without having the whole story spread across the backsides of every girl in town."

"Nonsense," was Max's answer. "Who reads what's written on a girl's panties? It's not what's on the panties that counts, it's what the girl looks like who's walking around in the panties that counts."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Max pay for involving Arthur with his sexy panties?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that since the items in the newspaper were true, Arthur had not been libeled. And since the idea of newsprint on a fabric was the important feature of the panties, and not the insignificant stories they contained, there was no invasion of privacy. (Based upon a 1961 New York Supreme Court Decision)

'Candidate' Successful Film

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For many years Hollywood held to the maxim, "Political pictures don't sell." If that's true, then how do you explain the current success of "The Candidate?"

No film within memory has been more blatantly political. It is a step-by-step analysis of a California race by a young liberal lawyer, played by Robert Redford, for the U.S. Senate seat held by a confirmed conservative, on Porter. There is no melodrama and scarcely any plot. It's a study of how a political candidate is "packaged" in the mass media, dropping a few of his ideals along the way.

"The Candidate" originated with Redford, who has a design to make a series of films depicting the American scene, especially on the theme of winning. It was directed by Michael Ritchie, who made Redford's "Downhill Racer," and produced by Walter Coblenz.

The film has a script by Jeremy Larner, a worker for the Eugene McCarthy campaign in 1968. A consultant on the picture was Nelson Rising, who helped manage John Tunney's successful race for the U.S. Senate in 1970.

"At a production cost of $1.5 million, the picture is bound to get into a profit situation," said Coblenz. He admitted that the film industry's traditional prejudice against political pictures at least partly dictated the modest budget.

"We felt we could make a big-looking picture at that price," said the producer, "and we got something in return: tremendous freedom. Warner Brothers let us go off and shoot it without any interference. Six weeks after shooting, we presented a rough cut, and there was no great discussion on changes."

Campaign expert Rising explained why "The Candidate" may have overcome the public's apathy toward political films:

"Most of them in the past have been melodramas. 'The Candidate' is the first to reflect the growing realization that politicians are real people. It's all part of the electronic age; the tube has brought politicians into people's living room."

Professionals who view "The Candidate" are amazed that it could have been made for $1.5 million. Crowd scenes galore. The big look to the film was the result of careful planning — and the campaign know-how of Rising.

"For all the crowd scenes we used real people, not Hollywood extras," said Coblenz. "Sometimes we made contributions to political clubs. We did that to get 2,500 people for the labor temple scene, which was filmed in the old Paramount theater in Oakland."

The film makers even stole some scenes from a Democratic fund-raising dinner. By adding a later scene, Candidate Redford appeared to be sitting on the dais with Senator Hubert Humphrey and Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty.

Conventions On TV A Bore Producer Says

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Minute-to-minute TV coverage of political conventions is a bore, says the former "Today" show producer, and the upcoming Republican conclave may be the most boring of all.

"Conventions are the dullest events in the history of the Western Hemisphere," says Al Morgan. "To cover them from gavel to gavel is insanity."

With the Republican nominees for both president and vice president already assured, he notes, next week's convention will lack the "good horse race" that adds audience appeal.

"I don't know what the networks are going to do in Miami," Morgan says, "they could phone that one in."

Morgan, who produced "Today" for seven years, was talking of conventions in connection with his new novel, "The Whole World is Watching," a fictionalized account of the violencewracked 1968 Democratic National Convention at which he coordinated "Today's" news coverage.

That convention wasn't boring, concedes Morgan, but much of the action outside meeting halls never reached TV screens because of logistical problems in Chiago.

Strikes, power failures and rules imposed by Mayor Richard J. Daley blocked networks from flying filmed segments to studios fast enough to reach the air, says Morgan.

Morgan's bock, a behind-thescenes look at how television operated at that convention, faults the networks for occasionally failing to realize where the story was — for staying in the convention hall when cameras should have been out in the streets.

Once the cameras zeroed in on the violence, says Morgan, producers began doubting that they should have broadcast such distasteful things.

"The thing that bothered me," he says, "was that television had done the best job it had ever done, under the circumstances, and they were ashamed of it.

"It's a frightening business," he adds. "Television is usually involved in entertainment, and news is only a small area of that....There is always the threat that the FCC won't renew your license, and the hucksters and money men become frightened."

This is why TV has avoided "advocacy journalism" which could offend the government that licenses it, says Morgan. It's also why conventions get constant coverage, he contends, since "money men" go with the winner in the ratings race at convention time.

Audubon Works To Save Ferret

It was John James Audubon himself who, along with a fellow naturalist back in 1851, first described this species that is found only in North America.

Secondly, poison has been the reason for the ferret's decline, and National Audubon has long been a leader in the fight againt the practice of spreading poisoned bait to eradicate wildlife "pests." Despite some recent reforms by the federal government, deliberate poisoning continues to be a threat to wildlife.

Black- footed ferrets are jug- eared little weasels with racoon- like burglar's masks. The ferrets themselves have never been branded a "pest," but they are found only in prairie dog towns, and for almost a century there has been a determined effort, much of it financed by the federal government, to destroy these towns because the grass-eating prairie dogs were said to be harmful to rangelands.

America's prairie dog towns were once estimated to cover 600,000 square miles. No one knows how much is left (that's one of the things the Society hopes to help find out), but it is clearly only a remnant of the past. As the dog towns have disappeared, so have the ferrets: they've been poisoned by eating prairie dogs that had died from eating poisoned grain, poisoned directly by eating strychnine- poisoned meat set out for coyotes, and starved out by the lack of the prairie dog town habitat without which they cannot exist.

To help the ferrets, National Audubon is financing a research study; has made specific recommendations to government authorities; has commended some state and federal authorities for promising new programs, and is continuing its general campaign against use of poisons in the wild.

The Society is funding a study to determine the numbers and distribution of prairie dogs and black- footed ferrets in Mellette County, South Dakota, and in other locations where appreciable numbers of the ferrets are believed to still survive. The project is under the direction of Dr. Raymond Linder of the Cooperative Wildlife Research Unit at the University of South Dakota, Brookings, S.D. The Society has urged the U.S. Interior Department to purchase 8,000- acre Nielsen Ranch in Mellette County, where more of the rare animals have been observed in recent years than in any other location.

Under the heartening order issued by President Nixon last February, use of wildlife poisons has now been prohibited on federally- owned public lands, the Audubon Society notes. However, the greater part of the poisoning recently has been done privately. Of the 37,000 acres of prairie dog town lands treated with poison in North and South Dakota during the past five years, 27,000 acres were privately held and only 10,000 were government owned.

Therefore National Audubon urges federal subsidies to private landowners for protecting prairie dog towns. The Society also commended both the North and South Dakota wildlife agencies for recent efforts to protect prairie dog towns and black- footed ferrets, and the interior Department for its work with this species at the South Dakota Field Station of the Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife.

The Audubon Society and other environmental organizations agree that ranchers have a right to protection from damage by wildlife that actually threatens livestock, crops or grazing lands. But, says the Society, they do not have a right to set out poisons that may wantonly kill other wildlife, as well, nor do they have a right to attempt to exterminate all members of a species, such as the prairie dog, just because some individuals of that species may present problems to some ranchers; the best protection is that which protects the ranchers' livelihood with the least damage to wildlife.

Highlights & Sidelights

from Our State Capitol

JEFFERSON CITY -- The Missouri Legislature will record a "first" in its history next month when it meets to act on bills approved during the last session that were vetoed by the Governor.

The upcoming veto session, slated for Sept. 6, is a new requirement of the annual sessions bill passed in the 1970 general election. While the measure changed the legislative calendar to yearly sessions of the General Assembly, it also allowed for the legislators return to take action an any bills receiving the Governor's veto.

When the Legislature met only in bi-annual sessions, any bill that later met the Governor's veto was dead until the next session of the Assembly convened.

Possibly coming on the heels of the veto session may be a special session called by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes. In a commencement address at the University of Missouri-Columbia earlier this month, Hearnes said he intended to "Call a special session and recommend to the Legislature that it approve an emergency appropriation to the University."

The Governor said he would ask the Legislature to restore over $3 million in appropriations which were trimmed due to an underestimate of state revenues. Included in this request would be some $1.6 million to rescind a recent increase in student fees.

Hearnes indicated in the speech he would issue the formal call for the special session while the legislators are meeting in their first veto session. However, Jerry Bryan, press secretary for the Governor, said a date has not yet been decided upon. Also undecided are what other measures, if any, will be included by the Governor in his special session call. Under the Missouri Constitution, only subjects recommended by the governor in a special message or messages can be considered at a special session.

Gov. Hearnes was disappointed when the General Assembly failed to pass legislation placing Blue Cross and Blue Shield under the regulation of the state Division of Insurance and creating a campaign spending law. He may ask for action in these two areas.

Additional appropriations for other state agencies and institutions also may be included in the special session call. The presidents of eight state colleges and universities last week adopted a resolution requesting that Gov. Hearnes ask the legislature for $3.3 million in appropriations to fill requests turned down by the last session.

Before that call, however, the Legislature will have 12 bills eligible for floor consideration in its first veto session. A number of these received the Governor's veto because they were duplicates of legislation already passed, line item vetos within appropriations bills that passed, or technically defective.

Among the latter were bills which set up new ways of funding state agencies, but issued no appropriations to the new fund. One bill was vetoed because it was written as one long run-on sentence without a verb, so the bill would actually have no effect, Bryan said.

Under the Constitution, the Legislature can only take action on the bills in their existing form and cannot make amendments. Because of this rule, Bryan expects few to face floor revivals.

A bill that might be revived would give cities collecting city sales taxes the right to inspect and audit the records of the Department of Revenue. Hearnes vetoed this because he felt it would weaken and possibly destroy the confidentiality of tax records.

Other bills were vetoed because they would place state agencies under legislative control, thus violating federal grant agreements which make them responsible to the executive branch of state government.

Of the 12 bills, Bryan said, "there are probably only two or three which were vetoed as a matter of policy or philosophy, and the Legislature may be able to consider these in one day.

"I would expect the special session call to then follow on the heels of the veto session."

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
ITT's Low Profile

DRILLING FOR OIL five workmen for the Purdy Sissom Drilling Company of Paducah, Ky., prepare rig for drilling through limestone after sinking a shaft to 1,400 feet in floating sand near Pinhook. Some 1,500 feet of hollow drill pipe are standing to the right of the men, waiting for minor changes on the rig and installation of safety valves on the casing installed down to 1,400 feet. Signs of oil and gas were found at the 1,400 -foot level but further drilling will be required to confirm the findings, Sisson said.

GOP Raises Curtain On Convention Today

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Republicans today raised the curtain on a smoothly programmed nominating convention they hope will lead to a second White House term for Richard M. Nixon.

The only real drama involves a duel over seating for the convention four years hence. But that was being waged off-stage when Sen. Robert Dole, chairman of the Republican national Committee, gaveled the delegates to order.

Their role, already written, will be played out over two day and three night sessions, leading to Nixon's acceptance speech Wednesday night.

The first afternoon meeting was given over to welcoming speeches and a filmed tribute to the last Republican to hold the White House before Nixon, the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Then, tonight, the spotlight swings to Nixon, the Eisenhower vice president who made it on his own in 1968 after losing the presidential race in 1960. Three keynote speeches hail the accomplishments of his first four years on Pennsylvania Avenue.

With everything programmed, down to Nixon's renomination Tuesday night, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's selection Wednesday night and final adjournment at 10:20 p.m. Wednesday, the Republican convention loomed as a sharp contrast to the all-night sessions and bruising floor fights that marked last month's Democratic Convention here.

Only one issue appeared headed for a battle on the convention floor, the question of how delegates will be allotted by states for the party's next convention in 1976.

The convention's Rules Committee considers the question today.

Unless a compromise can be reached, the issue will be fought out on the convention floor and before the nation's television viewers Tuesday afternoon in the only crack of the solid Republican unity marking this convention.

Threat of another floor fight, over the women's rights portion of the party platform, all but vanished over the weekend. Rep. Margaret Heckler of Massachusetts said no woman on the platform tried to bring up a statement on abortion.

Even the protesters appeared to be following a well-ordered schedule. Several hundred caused a massive traffic jam Sunday night outside the Fontainebleau Hotel, scene of a $500-a-ticket, fancy-dress GOP ball. A few eggs were thrown and a few party-goers were jostled but large numbers of nightstick-carrying police dispersed the demonstrators without injury or arrest.

With no Republican opposition to Nixon to worry about, GOP leaders kept up a steady drumbeat of criticism of Democratic nominee George McGovern. Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, the party chairman, charged the South Dakota senator had virtually destroyed "any chance for peace this year" in Indochina.

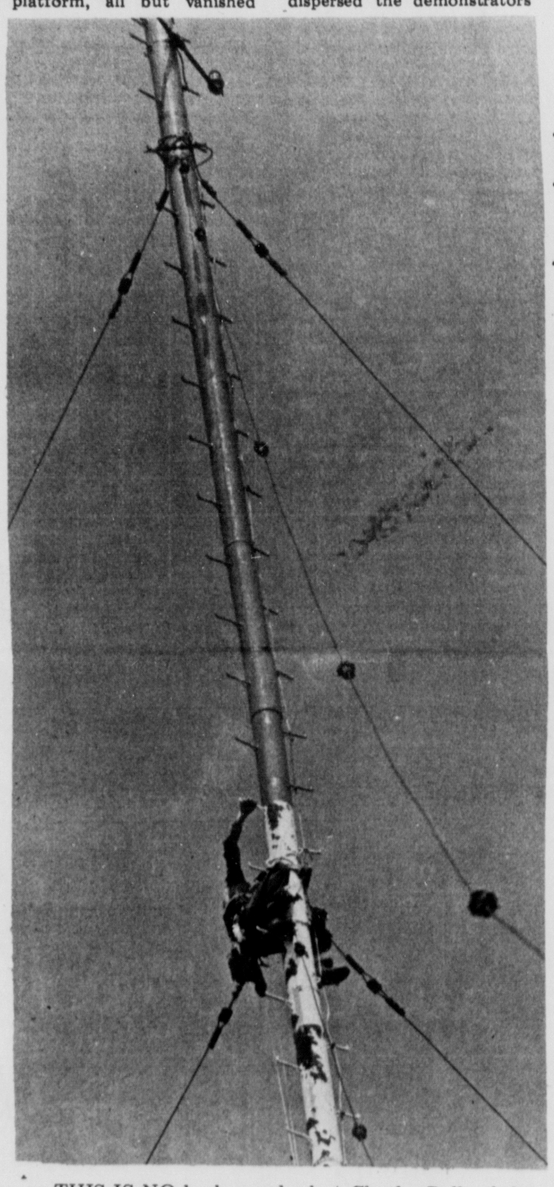
McGovern, meanwhile, planned a departure from the usual practice of lying low during the opposition party's convention.

He has a busy schedule for the week, including a tour of Pennsylvania flood damage today, a visit to former President Lyndon B. Johnson's ranch on Tuesday and a speech before the American Legion convention in Chicago on Wednesday.

As delegates arrived in Miami Beach, Dole added his voice to the effort to compromise the fight over the delegate-apportionment plan approved last week by the Republican National Committee at the behest of smaller, more solidly Republican states.

At the center of the fight is the prospective 1976 candidacy of Agnew, who arrived in this sweltering convention city Sunday afternoon proclaiming "I'm keeping the options open" on a possible presidential bid four years hence.

Two delegate challenges, affecting a single seat in New Mexico and two in Virginia, were before the convention's Credentials Committee.



THIS IS NO barber pole, but Charles Bell, of the Town and Country Barbershop paints it anyway. Bell painted the broadcast tower at KSIM all day Sunday before being driven down by the storm Sunday night. He says he still has about a half day's work remaining. Bell says he paints about one tower each week.

Attempted Breakin Charge Filed

CHARLESTON — A charge of attempted break-in was filed Saturday against Richard Leroy Clark, 30, of East Prairie, in connection with a break-in attempt at Nicholina's Restaurant on South Main at 1:50 a.m. Saturday.

Sheriff W. J. (Pedro) Simmons said Louis Mor, owner of the resaturant, heard the sound of glass breaking over the intercomm connecting his home and business. Mor investigated and reportedly apprehended Clark a short distance from the Ponder Bus Co. near the restaurant.

Simmons said three other businesses were entered early Saturday. An estimated $457 worth of knives was taken from the Vowels Hardware on South Chestnut St. and approximately $1,000 worth of office equipment was taken from the Simmons Equipment Co. on West Marshall St. The Storming Bull Restaurant on West Marshall was also entered, but nothing was reported taken.

Sheriff Simmons acted on a tip from an informant and the missing items were recovered.

Clark, who was released on $1,500 bond Saturday afternoon was questioned about the three breakins. He is to appear Thursday in Magistrate Court.

Attempted Breakin Thwarted By Police

NEW MADRID -- An attempted breakin was thwarted Sunday at 2 a.m. at King Mercantile Company at 201 Virginia by Officers Russell Cobb and Billy Carter, who were patroling in the area.

Ozell Shumate of 550 Line St. and two 16-year old boys, who said they were from Illinois, are in the county jail for investigation. Shumate was charged by the city police with driving while drinking and having no operator license.

Shumate fled from the scene in his car as police approached. He was taken into custody following a chase by Officer Carter. Officer Cobb apprehended the juveniles. Cobb said they had a three-foot length of pump pipe and a tire tool.

Shumate is on three-years probation after he and his brother, Carl Shumate, Sr., were convicted on robbery charges in September in Mississippi County. They were found guilty by a jury of taking $3 from Michael Cagle of Kewanee on March 13 while Cagle and his girl friend were parked on a gravel road near Kewanee. Kidnaping and rape charges against them were dropped.

Carl Shumate, Jr., and Robert Schollmeyer are serving 15-year sentences for robbery and rape charges stemming from the incident. The cases were transferred to Mississippi County from New Madrid County on changes of venue.

Blaze Destroys Store

GRAY RIDGE -- Firemen from three towns fought a blaze of undetermined origin Saturday night at Fulkerson's Grocery Store. The store was a total loss, but the Fulkerson's nearby residence was saved.

Morehouse, Essex and Dexter fire departments answered the 11:45 p.m. call and battled for three hours before extinguishing flames.

Morehouse fire officials said the fire probably started under the west side of the building and spread rapidly. A dollar estimate of damages is not available.

Lone Bandit Robs Station In Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- A lone hold-up man robbed the Southern Oil Co. service station at 400 Morgan Oak of $300 at 3:20 a.m. early Sunday morning.

The robber was described as a six foot, 200 pound, Negro wearing bib overalls and a levi jacket with the sleeves cut out. He left in an unknown direction.

A similar robbery occurred last Sunday at the Liberty Service Station at the corner of Morgan Oak and South Middle. The robber approached the attendant from behind and took $1,601. The robbery also occurred in the early morning hours.

WHAT THE
PEOPLE THINK

Rep. John W. Wydler (R-N.Y.) recently polled his constituents on network television bias. Only 33.2 per cent said that they thought television presented both sides of issues fairly. The majority, 55 per cent, said that television presents things unfairly.

Other interesting statistics from Rep. Wydler's mail poll show that 89 per cent favor a standard Federal procedure for intervening in public-interest strikes and that 86.9 oppose school busing.

Of all the encouraging signs of our times, certainly the best is the "back to God" movement among the youth of the world. The mammoth "Explo 72" rally in Dallas was just one of the outside manifestations of a strong return to morality.

It is good news when "Amazing Grace," a gospel song first published nearly 200 years ago should now become one of the most popular songs in Europe as well as in America. "The Baptist World" reports that a bagpipe version of the old favorite was recorded by the band of the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards, a British regiment stationed in West Germany and is now the No. 1 hit song on the Continent.

No less amazing than the present popularity of "Amazing Grace" is the story of its author, Rev. John Newton of London and Olney, England. Newton, born in 1725, the son of a ship's master, went to sea as an opprentice seaman at the age of 11. For six years he sailed the seas between the British Isles and the Mediterranian, and by the time he was 17 he had already gained the reputation of a swaggering, tough, blasphemous sailor.

Shanghaied and impressed into the British Navy in 1744, Newton, because of his seaworthy experience, was quickly promoted to rank of midshipman. But just as quickly the brash young man jumped ship, and for this he was publicly flogged and degraded. Boarding a ship sailing for Africa, Newton next became a slave dealer, trafficking in the selling of human flesh. In 1747 he went back to sea, this time as captain of one of the notorious slave ships. But in 1748, in the midst of a great storm at sea, John Newton surrendered his soul to God.

Returning to England, he arduously studied Greek, Hebrew, and the scriptures. It was not long before he was invited to preach in the town of Olney, Buckinghamshire; although it was not until the year 1764 that he was ordained as a full-fledged minister. Soon after that the famous poet, William Cowper, took up residence in Olney. He and John Newton became fast friends. It is undoubtedly through Cowper's influence and tutelage that Newton quickly learned the art of rhyme and rhythm and began to compose some of the most beautiful hymns written.

In 1779 the works of John Newton was published, entitled "Olney Hymns," and by 1880 they were being sung in America. In a modern hymnal in wide use in the churches of America, no less than seven of John Newton's hymns appear; and among them, "Amazing Grace," whose verses reflect John Newton's own experiences as one who had experienced the cesspools of human society 200 years ago, and having been saved by grace. How prophetic the words of Newton in another of his beloved hymns (Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken), when he speaks of that "grace, which, like the Lord, the Giver, never fails from age to age."

Doctors, beauty experts, husbands, wives, and conscience are advising Americans to eat less and less.

Against this awesome array, the food business would seem to be in a helpless situation.

But such is not the case. Food distributors expect sales to increase eight per cent in 1972.

True, individuals may be eating less in quantity. But a change in quality results in greater profits and an increased sales volume.

The food processors are optimistic because they believe in research and advertising.

Ninety per cent of the American food manufacturers introduce new products each year. For this purpose they are increasing budgets of their research departments by an average of six per cent annually.

The manufacturers predict that an increase in national advertising of ten per cent is necessary to gain public acceptance of the new products this year.

"However, retailers at the point of sale stand to benefit, or lose, in relationship to their own advertising effort. We can win approval of a good product, but we can not guide a prospect to a particular grocer," a representative of national food company asserts.

"Grocers who handle better products, which can be sold more efficiently at higher unit cost, must expect continuous increase in local advertising. It is a necessary survival investment," he said.

Instead of dumping billions in projects that can't possibly work, it should be aiding the people in business, who are financially short, so that their doors will remain open, and employment continue."

A NEW BEGINNING

U. S. railroads are living proof of the dependence of an industry's existence upon public policy. For three quarters of a century, public policy has ignored a changing transportation industry in which railroads passed from a monopoly status to but one of a number of high-competitive means of transport. As a result, railroads have suffered under greater and greater handicaps in the tax and regulatory area.

The rails have now undertaken an all-out effort to bring a deteriorating transporation situation to public attention. One of the significant events of the year 1970 was the release of the Report of America's Sound Transportation Review Organization. The primary assignment of ASTRO was to dig deep into the reasons for the decline of America's basic transport medium -- the railroads -- and to propose corrective measures. ASTRO's Report has been aimed directly at the public and its law making representatives. Public and legislative support must be marshaled for modification of transport laws and regulations essential to self-supporting, taxpaying, investor - owned railroads. Several ASTRO proposals are now before Congress, and others will be introduced in coming months.

There is evidence that the story of the railroads is getting through along with a realization that railroads are even more important to the country now than they were a century ago. There is also evidence that ASTRO's work is reaching the public -- 84 per cent of the population now regard railroads as "extremely" or "very" essential. The year 1970 could mark a new beginning for a misunderstood industry.

NEW RULES FOR
WELFARE STATE?

Dumitru Danielopol, the well known news columnist (Copley Press) wonders if he didn't come to this country 25 years too soon.

According to some politicians, he relates, everyone is "entitled" to a guaranteed income ranging from $6,500 to $10,000 for a family of four. Everyone would have a six-week vacation every year; government should take care of everyone's children; medical and dental care should be free for poor people; national subsidies are due everyone.

"I read a lot of testimony but no one seemed to mention hard work, initiative, or doing a better job," writes Danielopol. "As I recall, no one offered programs to the 'poor' when I arrived in New York 25 years ago. And believe me, I qualified under any yardstick you want to use."

Danielopol explains that as a non-resident alien he couldn't have a regular job. Two lawyers who owned property in New York City "took pity on him" and made him manager -cum-renting agent for 120 apartments on commission. He kept that job for five years, even after he took a second job at Radio Free Europe in 1950. He ran up and down stairs looking after contracts, repairs, cleaning, painting, and deadbeats, along with working as a writer, announcer, actor and planner.

"It never crossed my mind that anyone owed me a living," says Danielopol. "I did what millions of immigrants like myself have done for a couple of centuries. I fended for myself."

His Radio Free Europe job paid only $3,500 a year, so Danielopol taught English to fellow Romanians at $5 a lesson. He became "assistant" to a photographer, selling pictures of weddings and christenings and made 30c a copy. He supplemented his income by sometimes selling paintings, sometimes mutual funds. It was no sinecure,he says; it was either sell or starve. All of which kept him working to 11 p.m., and he had to be up at 5:30 a.m. to be in the Radio Free Europe studio at 6.

"Looking back, I suppose they were difficult years. I didn't feel sorry for myself. I just thought how lucky I was to be in this country, where I was free to take the initiative, free to try, free to exercise any talent God was kind enough to give me."

The psychiatrist wanted to get out to the links, but there were three women in the reception room who had appointments.

"I'll make short work of them," he said to the nurse.

He strode out to the reception room and pointed a menacing finger at the first lady. "Your trouble is you eat too much. I've told you to cut out all that food you eat. By the way, what's your little girl's name?"

"Candy," answered the lady.

"Ah," cried the psychiatrist, "see how your subconscious desires rise to the surface when you name your child."

He looked at the second woman. "And as for you, lady, you are a miser, you hoard everything, and by the way, what's the name of your little girl?"

"Penny,'. answered the woman shyly.

"Ah, ha," thundered the psychiatrist, "see how your subconscious reacts to your fondest desires. Penny, pennies, always thinking of money."

He looked toward the third woman, but she had already started for the door. She held her six-year-old son's hand tightly in her own. "Come, Peter," she said, "we'd better go now."

TACTIC

The results of political tinkering with the nation's medical system could be a demonstration of how not to achieve the widest distribution and the highest quality medical care. By and large, most of the schemes and plans to change the American medical system are politically oriented and ignore the counsel of the nation's doctors.

"American Medical News", for example, reports on a national press briefing on "Health Care for All," sponsored by a group devoted to the advancement of scientific writing. Notes the "News", "On theprogram, the federal planners were teamed ... with the academic planners ... The briefing had 27 speakers: 11 medical academicians, 8 federal officials, 3 physician-administrators of government programs, 2 activist medical residents, 1 union leader, 1 insurance exectuive , and 1 lobbyist for the Committee on National Health Insurance. There was not one practicing MD represented on any of the panels which purportedly were designed to provide information about provision of health care to Americans. That such tactics should be used to present to the public such a one-sided picture is deplorable."

During the press briefing, one proposal was made that if physicians cannot be persuaded to practice in rural and inercity areas, then the government should assign them to areas of need by legislative fiat. The proposal would put doctors under a form of dictatorship as oppressive as that of any Iron Curtain nation. Theoretically, the rest of the U. S. would remain free. Anyone who thinks that such a system would work is fooling himself.

Meanwhile, proposals of the medical profession to improve the quality and quantity of health care are largely ignored. Says the "News", "Ignored is the firm AMA policy that quality medical care for all -- including the poor -- is a social imperative. Ignored is the AMA's campaign to enlarge the physician population ... Ignored is the AMA's Medicredit proposal for a system of medical insurance based on tax credits for the poor and near-poor." When will people realize tha merely passing laws and spending billions of taxpayers' dollars are of themselves no guarantee of a health care utopia!

STRUCK OUT AGAIN

It was a distressing spectacle to witness in one weekend both W. Averell Harriman and Ramsey Clark being trotted out again by the TV news media to pontificate on foreign affairs. Averell Harriman creakily wheezed into the mike an assertion that the administration had misunderstood certain communist moves in Vietnam in 1968 while he alone had comprehended their true motives.

Ramsey Clark, filmed in Hanoi, brayed into the mike a statement that our POWs are in fact well treated, well fed and well cared for. Both of these men claim they should be granted credence because they are former governmental officials. Therefore, it is in order to evaluate their records while in federal office and determine their batting averages. Both have consistnet records and batted about one thousand; unfortunately, both were consistently wrong and batted about one thousand on the wrong side.

Time and time again, Harriman, Clark and those of like persuasion have gone to bat against the communists and been traded right out of their pants and then have exhibited the brazen effrontery to warbel to the U. S. citizenry what a fine job they did. Go back into retirement, Averell and Ramsey! When we want fantasy like you dish out, we read Mother Goose.

What is needed most now and what should be demanded by an aroused U. S. citizenry is tough, hard-nosed U. S. leadership who know the communist conspiracy, understand communist perfidy and are determined that the Freedom side will prevail. All 1972 campaign rhetoric should be evaluated in this light.

By Victor Riesel

For many of us who admired the FBI's skill and who believed it had been the victim of unfounded criticisms, which always had it "persecuting" intrepid dissenters but never talked of its crushing of the Ku Klux Klan and other Fascist extremists, the "Bureau" was a strange place without "The Director." Meaning John Edgar Hoover. Or "Edgar."

The new FBI chief came upon it and its friends suddenly. It was an eerie moment. Communist leaders and at least one globally known political leader in the Senate said the world was better off with Mr. Hoover dead. Many wondered what would be the new policies of Acting Director Gray. I asked him. Here, and I'm proud to offer it, is his reply written exclusively for this column.

By Patrick Gray III, Acting Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation

WASHINGTON -- I welcome this opportunity to write a guest column for Mr. Riesel. He had long been a friend of the FBI and of all men and women performing law enforcement duties in behalf of our fellow citizens. We appreciate deeply his warm support.

As the "new" head of the FBI, I accept this great responsibility with feelings of both pride and humility--proud that I have been selected to continue the work of J. Edgar Hoover who founded and built the FBI into the finest investigative agency in the world; humble because I realize that I, together with the dedicated men and women of the FBI, bear a heavy burden of responsibility to our fellow citizens.

In any organization, a new leader brings with him a different style and manner of operation. There have been some changes in the Bureau already--and there will be more. However, the substance of the FBI--its investigative integrity, high standards, and esprit de corps----has not and will not be changed. Working together with the dedicated men and women of the FBI, we will continue to be devoted to the highest ideals of public service.

One of my beliefs is that our free government must protect and perpetuate itself without denying the basic freedoms inherent in the American way of life.

In America we cherish peaceful dissent. This is the very heart of our democratic system. Difference of opinion can be lawfully expressed in many different ways.

However, planting a bomb in the Pentagon, the Capitol or other government building is not peaceful dissent.

A sniper attack against police officers carrying out their duties is not peaceful dissent.

Setting fire to a college building, vandalism and "trashing" a business, educational, or governmental office are not forms of peaceful dissent.

These and other acts of a similar nature are crimes--and should be so regarded.

In America today we are experiencing the rise of a new type of crime which is no less a crime because its perpetrators piously claim they are acting for so-called "political" aims.

I do not refer to peaceful assemblies, to peaceful debate and dissent and to peaceful demonstrations which are and must be protected by the Constitution.

Rather, I do refer, among others, to the extremist "New Leftist" movement, whose elements, such as the Weathermen, have been involved in guerilla warefare tactics. In a number of bombings, public claims of Weathermen participation have been issued.

The Weathermen, which broke with the Students for a Democratic Society in 1969, is currently operating underground. This means that their adherents have changed their names, are utilizing aliases, and are moving clandestinely from one one location to another. In this underground, guerrilla attacks against police, military installations, office and government buildings are planned. There are bomb factories in this underground where explosives are fashioned into homade bombs. Criminal fugitives--wanted for violation of Federal and state laws--find sanctuary in this underground.

The Black Panther party also has been involved in guerrilla violence, expecially in attacks against law enforcement officers.

The violence-prone extremist, whether of the "left" or the "right," represents a grave danger to our society. The person who would assassinate a political candidate, hijack an airplane, plant a bomb in a building--all of these individuals have a terryfying power to harass, disrupt, and destroy. There are the anonymous telephone callers who allege that bombs are secreted inside a building or in a vehicle. In our complex, interrelated society the potential destructive power of a fanatical minority--even one person-- is extremly great.

The full investigative facilities of the FBI, acting under Federal statutes, are being brought to bear aginst this type of criminal.

Then there is the threat to American citizens of organized crime. In my opinion, effective progress had been made by the FBI, operating under recently enacted statues, in combating this menace. I am now making inquiries as to whether it is doing all it can in this area. I can assure the American people that they will be no letup in the fight against these professional criminals who are defrauding citizens of millions of dollars annually.

In the cause of a free people and their free government to protect themselves-- from both the criminal and the ideological-type extremist--the cooperation of every citizen is of invaluable assistance.

In this regard, the labor movement, over the years, has been in the forefrong of the struggle forefront of the struggle for this noble cause. The extremist, in whatever capacity, and the criminal work against the best interests of the laboring man , . We in America are proud of the many contributions of the labor movement. It has been inestimable help to law enforcement and the FBI.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

MIAMI BEACH -- International Telephone and Telegraph, which got caught in a plot to help subsidize the Republican convention in San Diego, is lying low here at Miami Beach.

Two ITT press agents, Bernie Goodrich and Jack Horner, are passing out free booze from a small bar in their suite at the Eden Roc. But the drinks are intended for foreign newsmen who use ITT's communications facilities.

The ITT operatives are under strict injunction to keep out of Republican politics.

This is a dramatic departure from the way Dita Beard, the grand dame of ITT, operated at past conventions. She pushed ITT's corporate interests in the smoke-filled rooms with the brass and brains befitting a lobbyist for the world's most predatory corporation.

Whats's more, she could match the backroom boys drink for drink and story for story.

But this was before she wrote her controversial memo, suggesting that the financial offer to the Republicans was lined to the settlement of ITT's antitrust case.

No outsider knows for sure whether ITT promised the Republicans $100,000, $200,000, $300,000, $4000,000 or $600,000. All these figures were mentioned by ITT officials testifying under oath.

ITT's DOWNPAYMENT

The committee collecting the convention funds in San Diego received a check from ITT for $100,000 as a downpayment. Mrs. Beard in her memo and San Diego's Congressman Bob Wilson in a taped interview both put the pledge at $400,000.

But this is now political history. ITT saved its money: the Republicans moved their convention to Miami Beach. And Dita Beard? She's still in Denver where she wound up in a hospital with an alleged heart attack during the ITT hullabaloo.

Her attorney, David Fleming, tells us she is in such poor health that she may never be able to return to Washington. Her family doctor, Dr. Victor Liszka, tells us she has suffered another "relapse."

The doctors who were assigned by the Senate to examine her found "no objective evidence of a heart attack."

Fleming wouldn't say where Mrs. Beard is staying in Denver. Her address is secret, her phone unlisted. But he confirmed that she is still drawing full salary from ITT.

QUOTA POLITICS

The Republicans are quietly searching for a way to open their party to more women, blacks and young people without resorting to what Vice President Agnew has denounced as "quota politics."

GOP leaders are keenly aware that the Whig Party vanished after electing four Presidents in the 1800s, because the party wouldn't widen its base.

Republican strategists are particularly eager to broaden the party's appeal this year. The would like to take advantage of the expected Democratic defection and, hopefully, convert Democrats who vote for President Nixon into permanent Republicans.

The strategists have been cheered by an unannounced survey of Republican delegates. This showed 30 per cent are women, 13 per cent under 30, five per cent black, two per cent Spanish speaking- and two per cent Jewish. This compares favorably with the Democratic convention.

President Nixon, meanwhile, has joined Agnew in opposing the quota principle. In a letter to the American Jewish Committee about equal employment opportunity, the President declared:

"I agree that numerical goals, although an important and useful tool to measure progress which remedies the effect of past discrimination, must not be allowed to be applied in such a fashion as to, in fact, result in the imposition of quotas....

"I have asked the appropriate departmental heads to review their policies to ensure conformance with these views."

The word, however, apparently didn't reach the man in charge of economic opportunity. In an August 9 memo to all employees, Director Philip Sanchez established quotas for hiring.

Notes the memo: "While some notable progress has been made in the areas of minority and female employment, there remains much to be accomplished."

The memo, therefore, sets out the following long-range "goals" for minorities and women: Blacks, 30 per cent; Spanish-speaking, 6 per cent; American Indians, 1 per cent; Orientals, 1 per cent, women, 37 per cent.

Footnote: Associate Director Louis Churchville played down the reference to quotas. "I can't relate quota to goal," he said. "That we're saying in the memo is that if you have attrition, try and reach these goals. If you can't meet those goals, you just continue to try.

Missourian To Play Key Role At Convention

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — A key role goes to a Missouri Republican today in the opening session of the Republican national convention.

Mrs. Rosemary Ginn, national committeewoman from Columbia, is scheduled to present a summary of the report of the Delegates and Organization Committee to the full convention.

Mrs. Ginn said the Missouri delegation will be bolstered in Miami Beach by the presence of the Republican nominee for governor, Christer "Kit" Bond, and his choice for state Republican chairman, Richard "Dick" Berkeley, Kansas City, Mo.

In an address to the Missouri delegates, Bond, referring to the upset victory by Democratic President Harry S. Truman, said, "I want all of you people to take back to your workers this message:

"We have to be careful that this is not another 1948.

"The President's chances in Missouri are excellent. But so many people are enthusiastic about him that we may not do as well as we should if you people do not work hard."

The 38-year-old Bond turned attention to his own race for governor:

"We are not only facing Ed Dowd (Democratic nominee), but the weight of the Hearnes machine. They are going to play rough and dirty, but we think we can meet them head on."

"We've the finest slate of candidates for Missouri that I have seen in some time," Mrs. Ginn told a newsman during an appearance at a reception honoring Republican National Chairman Bob Dole, a senator from Missouri's sister state of Kansas.

"When I see these young men, and I think what they can do for the state of Missouri, I can't work hard enough," Mrs. Ginn said.

Another non-delegate from Missouri who is in Miami Beach for the convention is State Sen. Richard M. Webster of Carthage.

Webster, only Republican to be speaker of the Missouri house in recent years, is the father of the youngest member of the Kansas delegation.

Bill Webster, 18, is an alternate delegate from Lawrence, Kan., where he will be a sophomore this fall at the University of Kansas.

Young Webster is serving a dual role, because he also is a radio newsman furnishing reports to at least three stations in Missouri and eight in Kansas.

"I'm glad to be an 18-yearold delegate," said Webster. "We need to get more young people involved."

The alternate delegate-newsman said he is considered something of a traitor since he moved to Kansas and goes to school there.

"Everyone else in my family has gone to Missouri university," he said "I chose K.U. because I like Kansas.

"My family still lets me come home occasionally, though."

Young Webster attended high school in Carthage and is interested in both political science and journalism in his college work.

Between school term, he is a full-time newsman at radio station KLWN in Lawrence and works there part-time during the school year.

Asked about his interests at the convention, young Webster said:

"There are a lot of things I don't think are perfect, and I think we need to look at. We can't just give the President a rubber stamp. But I believe we have come up with a pretty good platform."

The 18-year-old alternate delegate said he has read the proposed platform plank on Vietnam twice, and wants to read it a third time.

"However, I think the President has done an outstanding job in handling the Vietnam situation," he said.

"I'd like to see the war over as quickly as possible. I have a brother who is on an ammunition ship five miles off the coast of Vietnam, and I'm certainly concerned.

"It's going to be an issue. It's going to be the issue."

New Irish Terrorism

BELFAST (AP) — Chieftains of the Irish Republican Army's diehard Provisional wing have ordered a new wave of terrorism to prevent Roman Catholics cooperating with the British Army.

Provo units were told to intensify intimidation to their fellow Catholics to stop any cooperation with the troops who occupied Catholic districts in Belfast and Londonderry three weeks ago.

Fraternizers are to be dealt with "harshly," the order said, and informers are to be shot.

The Provos announced that they were responsible for the murder Saturday night of a Protestant factory owner, James Neill. The guerrillas said they picked him up in a Catholic bar on a spying mission.

Another man was found beaten and shot through the head on the outskirts of Belfast. He was the 516th confirmed death in the three years of religious warfare in Northern Ireland.

British troops reported they hit three gunmen in clashes in Belfast and across the border with the Irish Republic but the army did not know if they were killed.

The army said its men discovered an IRA bomb factory in a house in Armagh and seized three gallons of nitrobenzene. It was enough to blow up more than a dozen buildings, an officer said.

Three metal beer barrels stuffed with more than 180 pounds of explosives were found in a car park alongside a Catholic church in Belfast.

Troops Down

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command announced today that American troop strength in Vietnam had dropped to 39,200 men as of last Thursday, and other sources said that in the ensuing three days it had fallen below 39,000, beating President Nixon's withdrawal timetable by 11 days.

Nixon had ordered U.S. strength in Vietnam cut to 39,000 by Sept. 1. He is scheduled to make another troop withdrawal announcement Aug. 28, and the strongest speculation is that the next cut will total about 15,000 men.

That would bring the total of Americans remaining in Vietnam to below 25,000, compared to a peak strength of 543,000 in April 1969.

About 100,000 more U.S. servicemen are fighting the war from air bases in Thailand and Guam and aboard ships of the 7th Fleet off the coast of Vietnam.

3'000 S. Viets Set Block For Viet Cong

SAIGON (AP) — Three thousand South Vietnamese troops launched a drive today aimed at blocking a North Vietnamese division from pushing out of the captured Que Son Valley into South Vietnam's populous coastal lowlands south of Da Nang.

U.S. Air Force crews reported spotting big North Vietnamese 130mm artillery guns and tanks in the area of the Que Son fighting, some 35 miles south of Da Nang. The air force communique said F4 Phantoms knocked out three of the guns and two tanks. It was the closest such heavy weapons have been reported to Da Nang.

The North Vietnamese pushed through the valley during the weekend, inflicting heavy troop and equipment losses on the South Vietnamese. It was the biggest Communist gain since Quang Tri fell last May 1 and posed an immediate threat to Da Nang, the country's second largest city, and a heavily populated 50-mile strip of Highway 1 to the South.

3 Arrested In Charleston

CHARLESTON — Three arrests were reported by the police department over the week- end.

HAVE YOU HEARD WHAT'S HAPPENING AT CROWLEY'S RIDGE RESORT?

Nixon To Leave For Convention

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — His nomination acceptance speech virtually completed, President Nixon was to conclude his longest-ever stay at Camp David today.

Nixon, who had dinner at the compound's Aspin Lodge both Saturday and Sunday night with foreign adviser Henry Kissinger, is expected to return to Washington today, then fly to Florida on Tuesday—the day the Republican National Convention in Miami Beach nominates him for a second term.

The President came to the wooded Catoctin Mountain hideaway last Monday and his continuous stay of eight days is the longest since he took office. He did return to Washington twice to keep appointments.

While at the Marine-guarded retreat, he cleared from his desk pending paperwork and drafted the acceptance speech he will give at Wednesday night's convention session.

He also spent portions of the sunny afternoons at the swimming pool near his lodge and took his Iirish Setter, King Timahoe, for walks along the compound's tree-shaded lanes.

Vietnam—a key issue in his bid for a second term—appeared to take a major portion of the President's time at Camp David.

From Camp David, Nixon was in communication with Kissinger while the presidential assistant conferred in Saigon with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Immediately after Kissinger returned to the United States Saturday, he flew to Camp David where he stayed until Sunday night. His journey prompted a flood of speculation about a possible breakthrough in Vietnam negotiations.

While there was no confirmation of progress, there were hints Nixon may use his Miami Beach acceptance speech to expose any new Vietnam Developments.

Agnew Undecided On 76 Presidency

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew says he has made no decision to run for president in 1976 but "I'm keeping the options open."

He set out that position Sunday amid speculation that the seeds of an Agnew presidential nomination in 1976 are being sown as the rules are written by the 1972 Republican National Convention.

"I'm very pleased with it," the vice president said when asked about Miami Herald and Washington Post delegate surveys showing him by far the favorite for the 1976 GOP presidential standard bearer.

"But this doesn't mean I've decided to seek the presidency," Agnew added. Agnew made the comment to newsmen as he focused his arrival and first-day convention activities on getting out a youth vote for Nixon.

The vice president predicted at a poolside youth-appreciation dinner that a great many more of the new 18-year-old voters and other young people are going to vote for Nixon than people expect. And he said they're going to "because of his programs."

Agnew said these include phase-out of the draft, and a foreign policy "that will keep us from becoming implicated in frustrating and debilitating — yes, and demoralizing — wars."

Two Arrests Reported

EAST PRAIRIE — Two arrests were reported by the police over the week- end.

Harvey Weakley of Charleston forfeited a $25 bond posted on a charge of having open beer in possession. Dennis Craig Prince of Charleston paid a $25 fine for careless and heedless driving.

Ann Landers
Mothers Sometimes Have To Take Children Shopping

Dear Ann Landers: "Fort Lauderdale's" remarks hit a sensitive spot. I am a mother who takes her two pre-school children shopping because I have no choice. Millions of other mothers are in the same spot. To suggest that this is a great way to "kill time" is rediculous. I can think of 200 other things I'd rather do.

Few mothers can afford a daytime sitter every time there is shopping to do. Dad isn't the answer, either. He seldom gets home before the stores close. Most Saturdays he works. When he is free, he is entitled to a day of recreation.

I resent being called a "slob" because I must take my children with me. I am trying to teach them shopping manners, not so much for the sake of the storekeepers, but for my own sanity. Do you think the merchants would prefer that mothers with small children stay out of their stores? If not, here are some suggestions for them:

(1) Don't put tempting objects within the reach of young children.

(2) Set up a child-sized card table with inexpensive coloring books and simple but sturdy toys. This would give the youngsters something to do besides terrorize Mom and the clerks.

(3) Larger stores might consider a playroom with sitters who would be paid by the so store or "tipped" by the mothers. I'd be happy to give someone 50 cents to take my child off my hands for half an hour or 45 minutes.

I'll bet "Fort Lauderdale" never had children to take shopping -- or she had a beautiful arrangement with someone. If it was the latter, I envy her. If it was the former, I feel sorry for her. —— Shopworn In Nebraska

Dear Neb' Apparently "Fort Lauderdale's" letter struck many a raw nerve around the country. The mail was heavy -- and 100 to 1 with you. Here's another:

Dear Ann: I live in Fort Lauderdale, too. If that lady wants to sit with my kids while I go shopping I'd be glad to drop them off at her house. What's her address? --- Beth.

Dear Beth: Sorry, no can do, but thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son will be coming home in a few weeks. He went four years to Stanford and after graduation took a job in Palo Alto for the summer. We paid his tuition for four years, but he lived up to his responsibilities by making good grades and staying out of trouble.

During his senior year he shared an apartment with a girl. We let him know we did not approve, but we didn't forbid it. We reasoned that a 21 year old boy has the right to live as he pleases away from home.

Yesterday we received a letter requesting that we take the twin beds out of his room and replace them with one large bed which he is willing to pay for. He is bringing his girl home in September and is sure we will get along fine (no mention of marriage). I cannot agree to this arrangeement and have told my husband so. He says the world is changing and I should get with it. True, I know our son and this girl were sleeping together in California, but somehow I can't bring myself to permit it in our house. What do you say, Ann? -- Greenwich Mother.

Dear Mother: I'm with you. To provide a double bed for the comfort and convenience of your son and his girl friend is tacit approval, if not encouragement of their premarital sexual activity. Stick to your principles and tell him nothing doing.

Hayti, PB In L.L. Championship

PARMA -- Weekend showers came a day late for Dexter and Parma little league baseball teams after they were knocked out of the title picture of the first annual Southeast Missouri Little League championship baseball tournament Saturday night.

The host club must have felt like it was raining when Hayti put on an awesome display of power in the top of the sixth inning to surge into a 16-10 lead after trailing 10-4 going into the sixth and held on for a 16-14 decision and ticket into tonight's 8:45 final against Poplar Bluff, an easy 6-1 winner over Dexter.

Trophies will be awarded the top four finishers along with the team displaying the best sportsmanship and to the event's two most outstanding players. A 15-player all- star squad will be selected from the entire 20-team tournament field.

Hayti struck like lightning in the top of the sixth frame to deny the host a shot at Poplar Bluff, scoring 12 runs on 10 hits and had 11 men reach base safely before an out was recorded. Gary Atchley was victim of the barrage and Ricky Morgan served as fireman. Atchley had limited Hayti to no- hits through three innings of relief.

But Parma's biggest downfall came in the field were 11 runs were allowed to cross the plate due to errors in the game.

Lynn Robinson headed up Hayti's offense with three hits in three trips to the plate, including a triple which was one of eight extra base slams by the junior Indians.

Ricky Morgan and James Perkins had three hits each for Parma, who had 13 safeties in the game.

Parma made a gallant bid to capture the victory in the last of the sixth when they scored four runs and had runners on second and third before a rash of bad luck, coupled with some top Hayti fielding, ended the hosts' hopes.

Poplar Bluff got two- hit pitching from Mike Lynch and a two- for- two hitting performance from leftfielder Johnny Taylor and a two for three job at the plate from Richard Hite to power the Junior Raiders offense that scored runs in all but the first inning. Hite and Taylor combined for the first run in the game by slamming a triple and single back to back in the second and then played key roles in scoring three of the remaining five runs.

Rookie Sparks Big Red

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Old Timmy is Tim Van Galder, a 28-year-old rookie quarterback, who came off the bench in the second half and sparked the St. Louis Cardinals to a come-from - behind 17-13 victory over the Denver Broncos in one of 10 National Football League exhibition games over the weekend.

Van Galder, a three-year member of the Cardinal taxi squad, came in with Denver ahead 13-0 and threw a 29-yard pass to Jackie Smith on his first play.

"We needed some momentum and he gave it to us," said Cardinal coach Bob Hollway after St. Louis had pulled the game out on Van Galder's five-for-eight completions for 82 yards, including the touchdown pass.

Van Galder was more fortunate than another rookie, running back Ray Jamieson of the Oakland Raiders. Jamieson suffered a broken neck during the Raiders' 34-9 romp over the Los Angeles Rams in their nationally televised game.

Jamieson underwent surgery for more than two hours and was reported "doing quite well" Sunday with no evidence of paralysis.

The Finley Phenomenon

Charlie O. Won't Win Any Popularity Contests, But He May Win a Pennant

CHICAGO — (NEA) — No team belonging to Charlie Finley has ever drawn a million in attendance. It's doubtful the figure will be reached in this prospective pennant-winning year.

At the halfway mark, the Oakland Athletics were running 50,000 behind the 1971 totals, primarily because of l'affaire Blue. Vida was the magnet last year when the A's hit a peak of 914,993. His long, bitter holdout this spring affected both the A's and Vida himself as an effective pitcher and charismatic personality.

Finley, the maverick owner who said he never before had to deal solely with a lawyer, confesses that both sides were hurt. Although he was portrayed like a plantation owner ("He treats me like a colored boy," said Vida after rejoining the team), Charlie protests, "No plantation owner ever gave one of his slaves a $10,000 car or a gas credit card or insurance or brought his mother and family out to the West Coast and put them up at the finest hotel and dined them.

"It hurts you quite a bit to see them hurt themselves. I think Vida Blue is a boy with problems."

Charlie has often been insensitive in his relations with people. Besides Blue (he tried to get him to change his name to Vida True Blue), he had major problems with Reggie Jackson when the young outfielder blossomed as a home run slugger in 1969. If a writer covering the club displeases him with a story, Charlie will get on the phone and cuss him out.

He has a healthy streak of personal vanity. He relishes the personal publicity which has come to him as a sports figure. He has a disconcerting way of referring to himself in the third person as "Finley did this." He'll plunge heartily into his own promotions, wearing a "Beatles" wig or growing a mustache.

Charlie is a distinguished looking man of average height with black eyebrows below a halo of silver white hair surrounding a high forehead. He is 54 years old and he has looked virtually the same for the last dozen years. The Finleys, Irish Protestants originating from County Offaly, are sturdy stock. His grandmother is a hale 97. His father, retired from the steel mills of Birmingham, Ala., and Gary, Ind., is a hearty 80. Charlie talks deliberately and well, with a trace of hardness in his speech from an industrial environment.

"I worked five years for U.S. Steel as a machinist," he says, "and completed my four-year apprenticeship. I also worked five years for a shipbuilder. I had nothing until I was 32 years old. I had trouble paying the grocery bill. All I know is work. I enjoy work."

He translates this into artistic success for the Athletics.

"I have developed this team according to my thoughts from the beginning," he says. "Trial and error, giving youngsters a chance and if they can't do it, move on. Sacrificing ball games so they can get the experience to be ball players. I work at my job 24 hours a day."

Missouri Champs Win Series Opener

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — The defending champions of the Babe Ruth World Series were knocked out of the saddle Sunday by a group of newcomers to the tournament.

Prince George, Md., scored in the last of the eighth inning Sunday to beat defending champion Puerto Rico 4-3.

Tim Maxwell opened the eighth with a hit to left field and Bill Waldow was safe on an error. Preston Taylor's sacrifice bunt was good for a hit, loading the bases with no outs. Greg Wells hit a ground ball to the third baseman, who threw wild to the plate and Maxwell scored the winning run.

In other games, Hawaii rallied for seven runs in the top of the seventh inning to break up a no-hitter and defeat Kirkland, Wash., 8-2, Montgomery, Ala., whipped Terre Haute, Ind., 10-3, and Sedalia, Mo., eliminated the host Pine Bluff team 4-1.

Righthander Greg Gooch of Sedalia set Pine Bluff down on two hits.

Terre Haute will play Puerto Rico at 6 p.m. today, Sedalia will go against Kirkland, Wash., at 8 p.m. and Prince George, Md., will face Montgomery at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

China Wants To Play Ball

SANTO DOMINGO, D.R. (AP) — Communist China is sounding out Latin American baseball officials on the possibility of entering an amateur tournament scheduled for November in Nicaragua.

Carlos Garcia, president of the Nicaraguan Baseball Federation, said Thursday Chinese officials had approached Charles Parsons, head of the Asian Baseball Federation, and showed interest in playing at an amateur world series in Managua Nov. 15-Dec. 5.

Garcia, here for a Caribbean amateur series, told a newsman the Communist Chinese are however, requesting the elimination of Taiwan from the roster of the Internation Amateur Baseball Federation as a condition to their eventual participation.

China's request is difficult, Garcia said. But he added that if the world body granted Communist China its wish, Nicaragua would issue visas to the Chinese team. He said he understood baseball was being played in Shanghai.

He said 22 countries from North and South America, Asia and Europe had already signed up for the world tournament.

The Prayer

FROM THE UPPER ROOM

(Jesus Christ) gave himself for us to redeem us from all iniquity. (Titus 2:14, RSV)

Prayer: Father in heaven, make strong my hope that Christ is able to keep what I have committed unto Him. Restore to me the joy of knowing that the Son of Man has power on earth to forgive sins. I pray through that man, who is Jesus the Christ, my Lord. Amen.

The Friend Of Marie Antoinette

THE FATAL FRIENDSHIP. Marie Antoinette, Count Fersen, and the Flight to Varennes. By Stanley Loomis. Doubleday & Co. $9.95.

Like King Charles II, historical cliches take an unconscionable time a-dying. To most of us, Marie Antoinette did not have one fragment of brain in her head to rattle against another; she was both frivolous and extravagant, and she got what she was asking for when the French Revolutionaries chopped off her head.

The "fatal friendship" to which the title refers is that of the queen and a peripatetic Swedish nobleman, Count Axel Fersen, who at the last tried with extraordinary bravery to slip the royal family across the Austrian border via Varennes on June 20, 1791, after the Revolution had begun, but before the Terror. No one really knows whether Fersen was the queen's lover, but Loomis believes he was. Through cumbersome planning and execution, plus incredibly bad luck, the attempt failed. The royal party was intercepted and returned to Paris, eventually to the guillotine.

Face May Not Be Familiar But Maxwell's Voices Are

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Unlike children, Len Maxwell is heard but not seen.

Maxwell is a voice. Or, rather, many voices. Sometimes the voice of a hamburger — or, perhaps, a bird, or, maybe, a cat. The unreal voices heard on radio and television commercials of unreal characters.

But, Maxwell emphasizes (returning to his own voice after having been a hot dog), "While you may be hearing me you never see me on commercials. That's because of product identification. If I identified myself physically with any one product, then I couldn't do commercials for a similar product."

Which, he says, could lead to a cut in income. Maxwell, a slender 41-year-old who carries on a conversation in a wild variety of voices (a little girl, a frenzied disc jockey, a super-virile beer drinker), doesn't care to talk about money other than to say his is a very well-paid field.

He discovered this while working as a standup comic in a club. "I was a comic for 14 years. I started at 21," he says. "I did imitations and then sketches (to illustrate he runs through Vaughan Monroe, Billy Eckstine and his version of a bunch of jailbirds singing "Heart of My Heart".)

"A man caught my act and asked me to do a commercial. I did and I was paid an exorbitant amount of money. I thought the talent agency had made a mistake and called to say so. I don't know which voice I used but apparently I gave the impression I thought the check was too small. They sent me more money."

Maxwell, who has been doing commercials fulltime since 1964, says he has done the voices for as many as six characters in one commercial, that he can do as many as five commercials in an hour, and that he averages between 1,500 and 2,000 different commercials a year.

He also supplies the voices in some of the cartoons shown in movie houses, being a partner in a firm that produces such short subjects. "In one cartoon I do 12 different characters," he says, "and each one has a different voice."

Actually, he says, "about 40 per cent of the stuff I do is straight — that is I use my own voice. But (with a smile) I have different straight voices." And he demonstrates, doing a perfume commercial several times and in his own voice but each time subtly shaded — sexy, cool, puzzled, warmly appealing.

"Ever since I was a kid I imitated people," he says. "I'd like to tell you how I do it, but I'm really not sure. It's more mental than anything else. You just think you are what they want you to be and the voice comes."

Voices, however, aren't enough to content Maxwell. "It's not that I'm tired of voices," he says, "but I've been there." So he currently is at work on the book for a musical comedy.

"Writing is my big thing," he says in his real voice. "It, I think, is where my future is at. I wrote much of my own material when I was a comic, and I've written comedy shows for television.

"I hope to finish the musical soon, and then I want to write a straight play. I really want to write."

Rent-A-Plant

New Business For Youth

He knows what he's talking about, too, despite his lack of years. For almost a year he has been a quite successful businessman.

"My mother and I have always had a big interest in plants," George said Wednesday. "Ours seem to grow real well. When a woman in my mother's office said she couldn't get anything to grow, we joked and said we'd rent her one of ours."

At that point the woman took them up on the offer. So George, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Voneiff, launched himself off into the rent-a-plant business. He charged 50 cents a month and found other customers easily interested and satisfied.

"At the end of the month we would either pick a plant up, leave it or bring another plant," George said.

"Our business is called DGEM. That stands for Daddy, George, Elizabeth (his sister, 9) and Mother. When DGEM had collected about $50, I decided to open a savings account."

George sells some plants and several florists are among the buyers.

Now he has branched out a bit — to plant-sitting.

"We will keep plants for anyone who wants to go on vacation," he said. "We keep them here (at his home) and take care of them free of charge. The only thing we ask is that we get a cutting of the plants. We call it pinching rights."

What's The Law?

The Case Of The Sexy Panties

By Jack Strauss, LL. B.

Arthur was a fairly well-known tennis player who lost a match by a score that he considered unmentionable. Actually, it became even more unmentionable than Arthur had contemplated.

Max, a lingerie manufacturer, got the brilliant idea of reproducing a newspaper page as a print for sexy panties. And the page he selected prominently contained the story of Arthur's loss.

Before long Arthur's name began appearing on the fanny of many a shapely girl and Arthur, when he heard about it, didn't like it. Consequently, he sued Max for libel and invasion of his privacy.

"My heaven!" he complained in court. "It was bad enough losing the match without having the whole story spread across the backsides of every girl in town."

"Nonsense," was Max's answer. "Who reads what's written on a girl's panties? It's not what's on the panties that counts, it's what the girl looks like who's walking around in the panties that counts."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Max pay for involving Arthur with his sexy panties?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that since the items in the newspaper were true, Arthur had not been libeled. And since the idea of newsprint on a fabric was the important feature of the panties, and not the insignificant stories they contained, there was no invasion of privacy. 'Candidate' Successful Film

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For many years Hollywood held to the maxim, "Political pictures don't sell." If that's true, then how do you explain the current success of "The Candidate?"

No film within memory has been more blatantly political. It is a step-by-step analysis of a California race by a young liberal lawyer, played by Robert Redford, for the U.S. Senate seat held by a confirmed conservative, on Porter. There is no melodrama and scarcely any plot. It's a study of how a political candidate is "packaged" in the mass media, dropping a few of his ideals along the way.

"The Candidate" originated with Redford, who has a design to make a series of films depicting the American scene, especially on the theme of winning. It was directed by Michael Ritchie, who made Redford's "Downhill Racer," and produced by Walter Coblenz.

The film has a script by Jeremy Larner, a worker for the Eugene McCarthy campaign in 1968. A consultant on the picture was Nelson Rising, who helped manage John Tunney's successful race for the U.S. Senate in 1970.

"At a production cost of $1.5 million, the picture is bound to get into a profit situation," said Coblenz. He admitted that the film industry's traditional prejudice against political pictures at least partly dictated the modest budget.

"We felt we could make a big-looking picture at that price," said the producer, "and we got something in return: tremendous freedom. Warner Brothers let us go off and shoot it without any interference. Six weeks after shooting, we presented a rough cut, and there was no great discussion on changes."

Campaign expert Rising explained why "The Candidate" may have overcome the public's apathy toward political films:

"Most of them in the past have been melodramas. 'The Candidate' is the first to reflect the growing realization that politicians are real people. It's all part of the electronic age; the tube has brought politicians into people's living room."

Professionals who view "The Candidate" are amazed that it could have been made for $1.5 million. Crowd scenes galore. The big look to the film was the result of careful planning — and the campaign know-how of Rising.

"For all the crowd scenes we used real people, not Hollywood extras," said Coblenz. "Sometimes we made contributions to political clubs. We did that to get 2,500 people for the labor temple scene, which was filmed in the old Paramount theater in Oakland."

The film makers even stole some scenes from a Democratic fund-raising dinner. By adding a later scene, Candidate Redford appeared to be sitting on the dais with Senator Hubert Humphrey and Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty.

Conventions On TV A Bore Producer Says

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Minute-to-minute TV coverage of political conventions is a bore, says the former "Today" show producer, and the upcoming Republican conclave may be the most boring of all.

"Conventions are the dullest events in the history of the Western Hemisphere," says Al Morgan. "To cover them from gavel to gavel is insanity."

With the Republican nominees for both president and vice president already assured, he notes, next week's convention will lack the "good horse race" that adds audience appeal.

"I don't know what the networks are going to do in Miami," Morgan says, "they could phone that one in."

Morgan, who produced "Today" for seven years, was talking of conventions in connection with his new novel, "The Whole World is Watching," a fictionalized account of the violencewracked 1968 Democratic National Convention at which he coordinated "Today's" news coverage.

That convention wasn't boring, concedes Morgan, but much of the action outside meeting halls never reached TV screens because of logistical problems in Chiago.

Strikes, power failures and rules imposed by Mayor Richard J. Daley blocked networks from flying filmed segments to studios fast enough to reach the air, says Morgan.

Morgan's book, a behind-thescenes look at how television operated at that convention, faults the networks for occasionally failing to realize where the story was — for staying in the convention hall when cameras should have been out in the streets.

Once the cameras zeroed in on the violence, says Morgan, producers began doubting that they should have broadcast such distasteful things.

"The thing that bothered me," he says, "was that television had done the best job it had ever done, under the circumstances, and they were ashamed of it.

"It's a frightening business," he adds. "Television is usually involved in entertainment, and news is only a small area of that....There is always the threat that the FCC won't renew your license, and the hucksters and money men become frightened."

This is why TV has avoided "advocacy journalism" which could offend the government that licenses it, says Morgan. It's also why conventions get constant coverage, he contends, since "money men" go with the winner in the ratings race at convention time.

Audubon Works To Save Ferret

It was John James Audubon himself who, along with a fellow naturalist back in 1851, first described this species that is found only in North America.

Secondly, poison has been the reason for the ferret's decline, and National Audubon has long been a leader in the fight againt the practice of spreading poisoned bait to eradicate wildlife "pests." Despite some recent reforms by the federal government, deliberate poisoning continues to be a threat to wildlife.

Black- footed ferrets are jug- eared little weasels with racoon- like burglar's masks. The ferrets themselves have never been branded a "pest," but they are found only in prairie dog towns, and for almost a century there has been a determined effort, much of it financed by the federal government, to destroy these towns because the grass-eating prairie dogs were said to be harmful to rangelands.

America's prairie dog towns were once estimated to cover 600,000 square miles. No one knows how much is left (that's one of the things the Society hopes to help find out), but it is clearly only a remnant of the past. As the dog towns have disappeared, so have the ferrets: they've been poisoned by eating prairie dogs that had died from eating poisoned grain, poisoned directly by eating strychnine- poisoned meat set out for coyotes, and starved out by the lack of the prairie dog town habitat without which they cannot exist.

To help the ferrets, National Audubon is financing a research study; has made specific recommendations to government authorities; has commended some state and federal authorities for promising new programs, and is continuing its general campaign against use of poisons in the wild.

The Society is funding a study to determine the numbers and distribution of prairie dogs and black- footed ferrets in Mellette County, South Dakota, and in other locations where appreciable numbers of the ferrets are believed to still survive. The project is under the direction of Dr. Raymond Linder of the Cooperative Wildlife Research Unit at the University of South Dakota, Brookings, S.D. The Society has urged the U.S. Interior Department to purchase 8,000- acre Nielsen Ranch in Mellette County, where more of the rare animals have been observed in recent years than in any other location.

Under the heartening order issued by President Nixon last February, use of wildlife poisons has now been prohibited on federally- owned public lands, the Audubon Society notes. However, the greater part of the poisoning recently has been done privately. Of the 37,000 acres of prairie dog town lands treated with poison in North and South Dakota during the past five years, 27,000 acres were privately held and only 10,000 were government owned.

Therefore National Audubon urges federal subsidies to private landowners for protecting prairie dog towns. The Society also commended both the North and South Dakota wildlife agencies for recent efforts to protect prairie dog towns and black- footed ferrets, and the interior Department for its work with this species at the South Dakota Field Station of the Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife.

The Audubon Society and other environmental organizations agree that ranchers have a right to protection from damage by wildlife that actually threatens livestock, crops or grazing lands. But, says the Society, they do not have a right to set out poisons that may wantonly kill other wildlife, as well, nor do they have a right to attempt to exterminate all members of a species, such as the prairie dog, just because some individuals of that species may present problems to some ranchers; the best protection is that which protects the ranchers' livelihood with the least damage to wildlife.

Highlights & Sidelights

from Our State Capitol

JEFFERSON CITY -- The Missouri Legislature will record a "first" in its history next month when it meets to act on bills approved during the last session that were vetoed by the Governor.

The upcoming veto session, slated for Sept. 6, is a new requirement of the annual sessions bill passed in the 1970 general election. While the measure changed the legislative calendar to yearly sessions of the General Assembly, it also allowed for the legislators return to take action an any bills receiving the Governor's veto.

When the Legislature met only in bi- annual sessions, any bill that later met the Governor's veto was dead until the next session of the Assembly convened.

Possibly coming on the heels of the veto session may be a special session called by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes. In a commencement address at the University of Missouri-Columbia earlier this month, Hearnes said he intended to "Call a special session and recommend to the Legislature that it approve an emergency appropriation to the University."

The Governor said he would ask the Legislature to restore over $3 million in appropriations which were trimmed due to an underestimate of state revenues. Included in this request would be some $1.6 million to rescind a recent increase in student fees.

Hearnes indicated in the speech he would issue the formal call for the special session while the legislators are meeting in their first veto session. However, Jerry Bryan, press secretary for the Governor, said a date has not yet been decided upon. Also undecided are what other measures, if any, will be included by the Governor in his special session call. Under the Missouri Constitution, only subjects recommended by the governor in a special message or messages can be considered at a special session.

Gov. Hearnes was disappointed when the General Assembly failed to pass legislation placing Blue Cross and Blue Shield under the regulation of the state Division of Insurance and creating a campaign spending law. He may ask for action in these two areas.

Additional appropriations for other state agencies and institutions also may be included in the special session call. The presidents of eight state colleges and universities last week adopted a resolution requesting that Gov. Hearnes ask the legislature for $3.3 million in appropriations to fill requests turned down by the last session.

Before that call, however, the Legislature will have 12 bills eligible for floor consideration in its first veto session. A number of these received the Governor's veto because they were duplicates of legislation already passed, line item vetos within appropriations bills that passed, or technically defective.

Among the latter were bills which set up new ways of funding state agencies, but issued no appropriations to the new fund. One bill was vetoed because it was written as one long run- on sentence without a verb, so the bill would actually have no effect, Bryan said.

Under the Constitution, the Legislature can only take action on the bills in their existing form and cannot make amendments. Because of this rule, Bryan expects few to face floor revivals.

A bill that might be revived would give cities collecting city sales taxes the right to inspect and audit the records of the Department of Revenue. Hearnes vetoed this because he felt it would weaken and possibly destroy the confidentiality of tax records.

Other bills were vetoed because they would place state agencies under legislative control, thus violating federal grant agreements which make them responsible to the executive branch of state government.

Of the 12 bills, Bryan said, "there are probably only two or three which were vetoed as a matter of policy or philosophy, and the Legislature may be able to consider these in one day.
